Problem plant is Sedalia's newest

Treatment troubles

The trickling filter sprays water over a rock bed at the south treatment plant, at top, as one step in cleaning the waste. The plant is overloaded, creating a problem in Breakfast Branch. At bottom, algae and other growths cling to rocks in the creek along 40th Street due to nutrients remaining in the waste water after treatment.

Sedalia's south waste water treatment plant, built in 1949, is the newest but the least efficient of the city's three treatment facilities.

The north plant, built in 1916, was improved in 1929 and 1949 and enlarged in 1965. The west plant was built in 1929, improved in 1949 and enlarged in 1966.

Funds for enlarging these plants were provided by federal grants and by the passage in 1963 of a city-wide bond issue. Enlarging the south plant, however, was not in the city's sewer improvement plans.

"A study by consulting engineers from Kansas City was done and a report made in 1963. They considered the capacity of the south plant adequate at this time," said City Engineer Bob Cunningham. Construction in the south part of the city, which would increase the plant's load, was taken into consideration by the study, Cunningham said.

As a result, instead of enlarging, improvements were made to the south plant in 1966 by adding polishing lagoons, a final step in waste treatment. Before, excess runoff went directly into the Breakfast Branch, the discharge stream for the plant which drains into Flat Creek.

Also, because the other two plants were enlarged and can handle a larger waste load, they have higher effluent standards than does the south plant, Cunningham said.

According to Cunningham, the construction of the Junior High School in 1972, the expansion of Bothwell Hospital in 1974 and residential development in the southeast part of town account for the current overload problem at the south plant.

Sedalia's south plant has also been the recipient of heavy metal industrial pollutants from Rival Manufacturing Co. However, the level of this has been reduced in recent months because of pre-treatment steps taken at Rival, according to Gary Johnson, city sanitation engineer.

The plant, designed to handle one million gallons waste flow per day, is now handling 1½ million gallons a day and has handled as much as 2.6 million gallons in one day, according to Johnson.

Johnson explained that at the south plant, sewage first goes into a primary clarifier, which is a large settling basin, where heavier particles of waste settle to the bottom. The waste then goes through a trickling filter where the sewage is trickled, or sprayed, over a 75-foot-wide by six-foot-deep rock filter. Finally the

Uganda detaining all British citizens

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Ugandan government barred all British citizens in Uganda from leaving the country today in an apparent attempt to force Britain to let President Idi Amin attend the Commonwealth summit conference in London.

Radio Uganda, in a broadcast monitored in Nairobi, Kenya, said a decision on the "plight" of the British in Uganda would have to await Amin's return from London. The Commonwealth conference opened there today without him or any other Ugandan delegates.

Amin was believed to have spent the night in Libya en route to try to crash the conference. But there was some speculation in London that Ugandan reports of the burly dictator's trip were a hoax.

These were the latest reports:

—A Ugandan who answered the phone at Amin's command post at Entebbe said he had heard on Radio Uganda that Amin had already arrived in London. English-language broadcasts made no mention of the arrival, but the radio also broadcasts in several African languages. There was no indication in London of his arrival.

—A Norwegian reporter who telephoned Kampala, the Ugandan capital, was told by a spokesman for Amin that the president had left his overnight way station and was sailing for Britain on a ship. "The president is going to call us when he has reached the British capital," the spokesman said.

The embargo on the British in Uganda was similar to a ban placed on about 240 American nationals in the country last February after President Carter said reports of a wave of mass murders by Amin and his supporters "disgusted the entire civilized world." That ban was lifted after four days.

The British Foreign Office in London said about 300 British citizens live in Uganda, most of them missionaries. They elected to stay in the country against British advice when diplomatic relations between the two countries were broken last July.

There was no word today on whether Amin was on the move again or whether he was approaching Britain.

Prime Minister James Callaghan recently wrote Amin that it would be "inappropriate" for him to come to London, and privately British officials said he would be kept out because of the mass killings his regime allegedly has committed.

Radio Uganda also claimed that a British reconnaissance plane was detected over Uganda this morning but later flew away. "In the event of it reappearing it will be smashed," a Ugandan spokesman said.

Radio Uganda said Amin, after leaving at 3 a.m. Monday in a plane loaned by a friendly country, stopped off in an Arab country. It said he was expected to fly to France, West Germany or Ireland and cross the English Channel by boat today or Thursday.

Since Amin has closer ties with Libya's Moammar Khadafy than with any other Arab leader, it was generally assumed that his plane came from there and that Libya was where he stopped.

Although Uganda is a member of the Commonwealth, British officials said its president would not be allowed to enter Britain because of the mass murders attributed to him and his troops and police in the six years since he ousted President Milton Obote.

Board to investigate country club purchase

The possibility of the city purchasing the Sedalia Country Club golf course and grounds to provide municipal recreation facilities will be investigated by members of the Sedalia Park Board, it was decided at a board meeting Tuesday night.

Newly-elected board chairman Bill Register brought up the idea and, along with several other board members, will pursue this possibility by checking with the country club's board of directors. The nine-hole club golf course was heavily damaged by the May tornado, which also demolished the club house and damaged the tennis courts and pool.

Roscoe Righter, director of parks and recreation, stressed this idea was not a result of long-range planning, but "was an opportunity that kind of presented itself." The only local public golf course is Elm Hills, but it is a sand greens course which is not favored by many local golfers, Righter said.

Although it is open to the public, the Elm Hills course is privately-owned.

Presently, board member Mrs. Tuck Van Dyne said Wednesday, many local persons play the municipal golf course at Marshall, which is a grass greens course.

If the property were to be purchased, Righter said the municipal course could "be a good revenue-producing" item in addition to providing a public service. The tennis courts at the country club would be restored, but the club pool would probably not be saved "because three pools are the right number

Sewage plant expansion hinges on city user fee

By VICKI MARSH
Staff Writer

A city sewer charge on commercial and industrial customers will have to be implemented before Sedalia can accept a federal construction grant to expand the south waste water treatment plant, 28th and New York, according to City Engineer Bob Cunningham.

The plant, designed to handle a million gallons of waste flow per day, is currently handling 1½ million gallons per day. The overload situation is the most recent in a long history of pollution problems on the Breakfast Branch, the discharge stream of the plant that feeds into Flat Creek.

"Sedalia is one of the very few cities of this size that still finances its waste water treatment and general sewage plant operation through the city," Cunningham said.

Ralph Dedrick, city clerk, reported that Sedalia has never had a sewer charge although it "has been considered several times by the council, usually at budget time."

The city recently received approval from the federal Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) to conduct a study of the Sedalia sewer system. The study, the first step in acquiring a federal construction grant, had already been approved by the state Clean Water Commission (CWC).

Once the one-year study is completed, and depending on its recommendations, the city can apply for a federal construction grant. To be eligible, however, Sedalia must have a city sewer charge.

"EPA has regulations now requiring cities to establish city sewer charges before it can get a federal grant for construction of a plant," said Cunningham. "This charge has to be established on commercial and industrial customers. The federal government is then refunded over a number of years from that city service charge," Cunningham said, adding that this law has been in effect since about 1972.

According to Cunningham, whether or not a sewer charge in Sedalia would include residential customers would be decided after a rate study (based on cost per $100 assessed valuation) had been conducted.

"That will have to be decided by the mayor and the City Council after a rate study is made and depending on requirements of EPA and CWC," Cunningham said. "Basically, it's an EPA requirement that there be a charge on industrial and commercial users with all new grants."

Cunningham explained that individual costs to companies or industries vary in different cities and depend on such factors as miles of sewer maintained in the city, number of treatment plants and amount of waste contributed.

"The charge in most cities is based on volume of flow of commercial and industrial waste. In residential areas they have a flat monthly rate or it is based on monthly winter consumption of water. Charges are based on the load they contribute to treatment plants," Cunningham said.

Councilman Gary Dey, chairman of the sewer and sanitation committee of the City Council, believes passing the city sewer charge will be a problem in Sedalia.

"It poses a big problem because so many companies are already environmentally conscious because of federal and state regulations," Dey said. "Plus, we (the city) are charging them...I can see where the managers of these companies would feel they're being taxed upon taxed," Dey said.

As for implementation of this charge on residential owners, Dey believes it may be a possibility in Sedalia in the next five to 10 years because of drought conditions, however, and not as an immediate measure to provide additional revenue to enlarge the south plant.

There are several possible solutions to the overloading problem at the south plant which the study might suggest, Cunningham said.

"They might decide to combine the south plant with another plant, or to pump sewage from one plant to another. It depends on the economics of the situation," he said.

Bob Hentges, with the Water Quality Division of the state Department of Natural Resources (DNR) in Jefferson City, however, does not think expansion of the plant will solve the pollution problem.

"The only thing we can do now is go with a bigger plant. Expansion is a stopgap measure. It won't be effective on a long-term basis.

"The best approach is full speed ahead on building a bigger sewage plant. The question is, how quick can they get the study completed and get the construction money," Hentges said.

The study, which includes a 25-square-mile area outside the city limits and a 10-square-mile area within the city limits, would extend west to Muddy Creek, south to Flat Creek, east to the Maplewood subdivision and north to Cedar Creek.

The original estimated cost of the study was set at approximately $23,000 in 1973, the year the city first applied for the grant. The CWC, however, in 1974, authorized the city to expand the scope of the study beyond the city limits. This resulted in an increase in the cost of the study to $49,000.

Funding for the study is 75 per cent federal, 15 per cent state and 10 per cent city. EPA's recent approval was for its share of the original estimate, or $17,250.

Young in good graces after Carter meeting

WASHINGTON (AP) — Andrew Young is in good graces at the White House even though he says the last four presidents were racists and the Russians are racists and Abraham Lincoln was a racist, too.

"He's absolutely in no trouble," said one administration source in a position to know. The administration official spelled out President Carter's attitude after the U.N. ambassador spent half an hour Tuesday with Carter in the Oval Office.

The ambassador, black and a former lieutenant to civil rights leader Martin Luther King, emerged from the meeting with Carter saying that the President told him "in context he understood what I was trying to say" about racism.

Did he encourage Young to keep speaking out?

"No. I don't think he has to encourage me. But he didn't tell me to shut up, either."

Does Carter share his views on racism?

"I think he understands my views on racism."

Does he share them?

"Oh, I doubt that, no."

But the administration source said Carter "for the most part" thinks Young is saying things that need to be said. "They had a very cordial and friendly meeting," the source said. "He (Carter) is not upset by what the Republicans are saying."

Indeed, the administration went to some lengths to show that Carter will not knuckle under to Republican demands that Young apologize for his remarks or be ousted. Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., told reporters Young should never have been appointed.

Radical plan foreseen

Downtown task force formed

A group of about 40 downtown Sedalia merchants met with the Planning and Zoning Commission Tuesday night and named a seven-member task force to research and develop a plan to improve the downtown business district.

Headed by Edward Yuille, the group's plan will be subject to the approval of members of a downtown association that is to be formed later.

"I think if we do a plan for the downtown area, it will be a radical one," said Ken Veiharticky, city planner for the Show-Me Regional Planning Commission, at the outset of the meeting. He emphasized that a major street plan is a vital part of the downtown plan. Such a plan would establish main arteries of traffic flow through Sedalia and into the downtown area.

No formal responsibilities were assigned the task force, other than to develop a downtown plan. Several possible duties were suggested in a brainstorming session involving the merchants and owners who attended the meeting.

"One thing I think we ought to get out to the whole community is that what benefits downtown benefits all of Sedalia, because when the downtown goes a lot of other things in a town go," Yuille, owner of Fine Art Studio, said.

In addition to Yuille, the task force is comprised of Donna and Rolf Kaupp, George Lockett, Joan Banner, Marge Alpert and Philip Pfeiffer.

Yuille announced the task force will hold an organizational meeting at 7:30 p.m. Monday at the Municipal Building.

Merchants and owners at the meeting suggested the task force survey the needs of downtown businesses and solicit ideas used by other communities to aid the growth of central business areas.

One of the major concerns of the meeting was how to finance the task force. One proposal that will be discussed at the Monday meeting is charging a membership fee to all those wishing to belong to a downtown organization.

Yuille said he thought membership in a downtown organization should be open to all those interested in the central business district. A definition of such an organization's membership will be one of the first concerns of the task force.

George Berenyi, chairman of the Planning and Zoning Commission, said he thought the meeting was one of "the most fruitful" held in connection with city planning in Sedalia.

He said following the meeting that the downtown area will be the first to have a plan developed in conjunction with the city's comprehensive plan. The com-

House of David survivors older, but commitment to wait remains

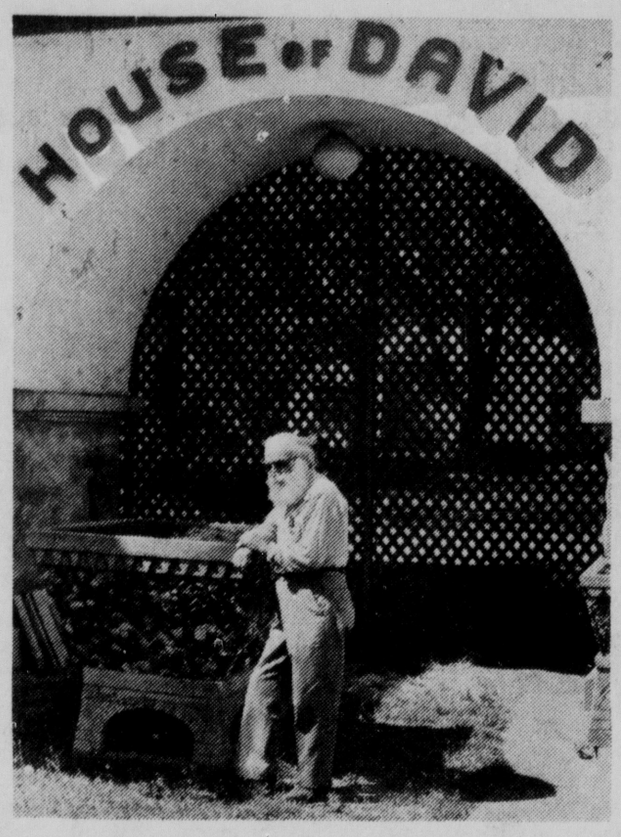

By TOM TIEDE

BENTON HARBOR, Mich. (NEA) — Seventy-four years ago this spring a group of people claiming to be descendants of the scattered tribes of Israel gathered for resettlement here on the shores of Lake Michigan. They built homes and industry to await "the end of the earth's wicked kingdoms" and "the beginning of everlasting life."

Today the survivors of the House of David are still waiting. They live in communal obscurity on the north end of this port, still insisting that God will yet "lay low the terrible" and reward the just with eternity. None sits in the sun waiting for the end, but judgment day remains for each a collective rather than individual matter.

Technically, it may be that no brother or sister in the House of David will live to see the long heralded bounding of Satan. Members have been lamentably poor salesmen, hence their recruitment program folded years ago. There are no new members, and the old members are old indeed; fewer than 100 Davidites still live, and their average age is 75.

The last convert was George Wackym, but even he is no young turk. When he joined in 1957 he was 54, now he's 74. Not that Wackym acts his age. He is frisky, he is fully employed, also he is married to a younger woman (in her 50s). But as all Davidites, Wackym never shaves and his snow white beard is a clue to his years.

George Wackym . . . one of the last

Wackym runs the House of David Arts Shop. Which means he frames mirrors. Davidites operate three other enterprises: a greenhouse, a trailer camp and a tourist park. From the beginning, all ventures of the House of David have been communally owned. Profits are given to the group account, from which each member draws according to need.

Not surprisingly, the House of David's economic structure has periodically raised eyebrows in the open marketplace. Many Americans have felt that Davidite sharing smacks of communism. During the 1930s the House was subject to repeated attacks regarding patriotism. Some right wing groups still harbor ill feelings.

In the 1920s the ill feelings were also nourished by rumors of sexual hijinks with the House of David. The group's founder, Brother Benjamin, was accused of promiscuity. For Davidites this was like suggesting that Jesus was illegitimate. Despite outside snickers, though, Benjamin remained in power, and is venerated to this day.

Those who knew Benjamin argue that he was incapable of evil. Even if he might have been errant on occasion, they insist the House of David remains rooted to his memory. He died in 1927, at the age of 66, which the House believes is significant. "Jesus died at 33," says the last convert, Wackym, "Benjamin died at 33 plus 33 which is 66."

For all the controversy generated by its economic and social lifestyles, however, the House of David might have remained merely a southwest Michigan concern were it not for its athletic endeavors. Americans who know nothing about the scattered tribes of Israel may remember the House of David's zany traveling baseball team.

It was the Harlem Globetrotters with heavy five o'clock shadow. Davidite teams traveled the nation in search of home town teams willing to pay for the privilege of getting trounced. And what with the absence of TV, citizens were delighted to pay for the treat of seeing men use their two foot beards to catch occasional outfield bloopers.

Tom Dewhurst, now a leader of the House of David, played on those teams. He remembers the comedies more than the scores: "Our beards were a secret weapon. If a man got trapped between bases, he'd switch back and forth so fast that he'd go one way and his beard the other. The opposing team laughed so hard they'd drop the ball."

Dewhurst says some House players were good enough to be offered big league contracts. But the team was disbanded in the 1930s. Afterward, and into the 1950s, other teams used the name "House of David," but they were ringers, men who grew beards to cash in on the Davidites' notoriety; today the House is still outraged by the fraud.

Perhaps outrage is too harsh a word. Surviving members of the House of David are mild folks. They dress moderately, eat moderately (they are vegetarians), and live in admirable harmony. Even if their economic outlook is communal, they retain a love for labor; men to their 90s cut the grass at the community homes.

The simplicity is understandable. Gone are the times when hot-eyed Davidites engaged in dozens of enterprizes, including one of the nation's largest cold storage plants. Today the eyes are gray here, life is slow, the paint peels on the homes because there aren't enough members left who are young enough to climb repair ladders.

And yet their convictions never age. George Wackym says vigorously that the day will still come when "there shall be no more sorrow, or crying, neither shall there be any more death." That's what's sustained the House of David for three quarters of a century. "We don't look to die," says the last convert, "we look for life."

Moscow hotel

Russians take notes on foreign know-how

By THOMAS KENT
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — Near the heart of downtown Moscow stands a 2½-acre testimonial to the Kremlin's continuing need for foreign know-how: The construction site for a 28-story luxury hotel going up with Italian steel, French supervisors, Yugoslav labor and American and German machinery.

There is barely a Russian in sight.

In return for promised completion by the 1980 Olympics, when Moscow badly needs acceptable facilities for visitors, the Soviet Union has let foreigners run most of the $120-million project. Moscow's hands-off attitude has even extended to letting the foreign workers hold brief strikes — unheard of for Soviet workers.

The project offers the Soviet Union a chance to study Western building technology closeup while saving its own hard-pressed construction workers for other projects.

The main contractor for the project is Sefri, a French finance and construction company.

The Yugoslav workers specialize in structural steel work and are now up to the fourth floor of the building. Inside a temporary office at the site, the Yugoslavs said they were profiting handsomely from their time in Moscow.

"I make 2½ times here what I would make in Yugoslavia," said one burly foreman. He said he and many of his colleagues would go home with their own automobiles, purchased in special Moscow stores for foreigners. He did not say what he was earning.

Russian construction executives often visit the worksite, which is shut off by a long green fence from the neighboring Soviet Exhibition of National Economic Achievements and a dreary-looking Soviet hotel. Sometimes, the Soviets stay for lunch in the project's French restaurant.

The first foundation work for the hotel took place last May and construction is slated to end by April 1979.

The hotel is to have spacious lawns, a fountain and a pool — none of them typical of current Moscow hotels. French craftsmen will do most of the interior decorating and Soviet administrative and service personnel for the hotel will be sent to France for training.

"They'll have to learn how to repair everything, because it's all foreign equipment," a Sefri official said. The French company will retain no equity in the project after it is completed.

There is a union on the worksite representing the 300 Yugoslav workers, but so far labor disputes have been minimal. They have mainly been related to disputes over the delivery of pay, one source said. Nonetheless, even brief work stoppages have drawn the attention of Soviet officials, curious to "see" a strike even if it only amounts to men sitting about doing nothing.

The board of directors of Rival Manufacturing Co. has lowered the regular quarterly dividend to 20 cents per share, half of the previous dividend.

The action was apparently taken because "sales and earnings for the second quarter are currently running below the first quarter levels," a company spokesman said.

Veteran film director urges decency

By HILMI TOROS
Associated Press Writer

PALERMO, Sicily (AP) — Frank Capra, Hollywood's grand old director who once caused a sensation by removing Clark Gable's T-shirt, says films should be used as a vehicle to spread decency and steer away from quickie and profitable nudity.

The son of Sicilian peasants who emigrated to the United States 74 years ago, Capra marked his 80th birthday with an investigative "roots" trip to his native Sicily and the rest of Italy.

He made it clear even in Italy that he's not through with the cinema yet — at least as far as lecturing goes.

After 40 films and three Academy Awards for best director, he has been out of the directorial spotlight for 15 years, lately devoting his time and seemingly endless energy to a dialogue encouraging the young to go into the movie business and try to change its direction.

In his Palm Springs, Calif., home or his native village outside this Sicilian capital, his theme is that the cinema is still "the best medium."

"I'm an optimist, an idealist and I believe in human comedies," he remarked in an interview. "There are indications among students of the cinema that they want to return to human comedies, my type of films. 'Rocky' is an example of that."

He said he wished he had made 'Rocky,' chosen by the Academy he once headed as the best film of the year, because "it's about simple people succeeding, like President Carter for instance."

It's also like Capra himself — born in the rugged hills of Sicily, taken to the United States at 6 and an example of an immigrant who beats the odds and vaults to fame in competitive Hollywood.

As he tells it: "I was short, born in a foreign land, and son of poor and illiterate peasants. But in the cinema there is no formula for success except perhaps for creativity."

A chemical engineering graduate from Cal Tech, Capra said he entered the film business, answering an ad in the paper, to make money while waiting for a hoped for job as a science teacher.

With Columbia and other picture companies, he was noted for spreading optimism in the bleak 1930s, also aiding the careers of Clark Gable in "It Happened One Night," James Stewart in "It's a Wonderful Life," Barbara Stanwyck in "Miracle Women" and Bette Davis in "Pocket Full of Miracles."

He has always shunned pornography and now calls it "animated French cartoons." His rare concession to it was to portray Gable without a T-shirt in "It Happened One Night," which won him an Oscar.

"Mr. Deeds Goes to Town" earned another and "You Can't Take it With You" a third.

The years have not tarnished his optimism and interest in future generations of directors, pushing him to speak at 75 universities in the last five years.

Mathewson is named member of committee

Rep. Jim Mathewson, D-Sedalia, has been named a member of the Appropriations Conference Committee by Speaker of the House Kenneth J. Rothman.

Concerning his appointment, Mathewson said, "It is a different viewpoint on this committee. In the past, my main concern has been for my district and the people who live in it. That is still foremost in my mind, but in these conference hearings, you have to look at the entire state and its needs."

In matters dealing with appropriations for state projects and funds, bills must be cleared by both the House and the Senate. Such bills start in the House and then go to the Senate, where changes usually are made.

As a result, the bills then go to a conference committee, which works out the differences between the House and Senate versions of the same bill.

Mathewson's new responsibility, according to Rothman, means the second-term legislator will face extra hours of work. Before most legislators begin their day's work, the conference committee is in session attempting to find a suitable House-Senate compromise.

Rothman said Mathewson and other committee members are moving much faster this year than in the past on appropriations measures.

"It is not only an honor but also a major responsibility to be named to the Appropriations Conference Committee," Rothman said.

Ward rally is set

Second Ward Democrats will hold a rally at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at the Pettis County Courthouse for their candidate, Robert Morris, 805 North New York.

Morris was nominated last month to face Republican Lee Richardson in a special election Tuesday to choose a successor to the late Stanley Holt, a councilman who died this spring.

Arraignments are held for two Sedalians

Two Sedalia area men were arraigned in Magistrate Court Wednesday morning following their arrests Tuesday and Wednesday by authorities.

Donnie Wiseman, 19, Route 4, was arraigned on felony charges of tampering with a motor vehicle in connection with a May 1 incident in which he allegedly took a CB radio from a car owned by Helen Bennett, address unknown.

Wiseman was originally arraigned on the charge May 2, however, the county prosecutor's office was forced to dismiss the charge and refile it later after the key prosecution witness, Gary Cooper, 18, address unknown, failed to appear at Wiseman's preliminary hearing on May 31. The hearing had been continued from May 24, its original setting, because witnesses were not in court. Wiseman was rearrested on the charge Wednesday morning by the sheriff's department.

Cooper was arrested Tuesday afternoon by Sedalia police on a writ charging him with failure to appear in court on a subponea, issued for Wiseman's preliminary hearing.

Wiseman remains in the county jail in lieu of $2,500 bond, while Cooper is being held in lieu of $100 bond. Both are scheduled to appear in Magistrate Court at 10 a.m. Friday.

Smith gets 6 months on tampering charge

Billy Joe Smith, 18, 813 East Sixth, pleaded guilty to charges of tampering with a motor vehicle Tuesday in Circuit Court. He was sentenced to six months in the county jail.

Smith and William Goodwin, 40, Knob Noster, were charged in connection with the theft of a 1967 Chrysler owned by Sedalia Cold Storage from the home of George Lockett Dec. 14. The car was later recovered by Sedalia police.

The revised EPA share would be $36,750.

"We'll just have to wait till the paperwork trickles down to find out what happened," Cunningham said. "Perhaps the $17,250 is only the first part of the $36,750."

If the rest of the federal funding is supplied, the cost to Sedalia will be $4,900.

The estimated cost for expanding the south plant, suggested by a firm of consulting engineers in 1973, was $1½ million. "That would be 30 to 40 per cent more now," Cunningham said.

Cunningham estimated it will take three to four years to complete the study, acquire the federal grant, and enlarge the south plant. The city's other option, a more expeditious measure, is to present the voters with a city-wide bond issue to appropriate funds. This would require a two-thirds majority for passage.

"I don't know if a bond issue is the answer. People pay taxes for services and they expect to, but do we tax again or try for another solution" to this pollution problem, Dey said.

"Any time you mention taxes, people automatically rebel. The only way I would consider putting it on the ballot is as a last resort," Carl Franklin, Third Ward councilman and chairman of the council's finance committee, said.

"If the federal and state governments come in here and say we're going to start fining you for this pollution, we don't have much choice. It gets to a point where it'd be more expensive not to do it (pass a bond) than to do it," Franklin added.

Mayor Allen Hawkins said he had not researched the problem thoroughly and was relying on department heads for suggestions.

"The thing is, how long does one wait when there is pollution? I don't think the city can afford to wait. I would like to see, starting as soon as possible, that we (the council) are going to have to face this problem head on," Dey said.

Former warden had no reason to believe that Ray a racist

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Former Missouri State Prison Warden Harold Swenson says he told two congressional investigators he had no reason to believe that James Earl Ray, convicted of the assassination of Dr. Martin Luther King, was a racist while a state prison inmate.

"I never had any reason to believe that he was a racist but there are some things you may not know, of course," Swenson said after he talked with the two investigators from the U.S. House Assassinations Committee on Tuesday. He described the talk as informal.

Prison Warden Donald Wyrick, who also met with the committee investigators for several hours, said they were to begin interviews today with inmates who knew Ray before he escaped from the main penitentiary in April 1967 while serving a 20-year term for robbery. Wyrick said he had identified eight to 10 inmates for the pair to interview as well as six prison employes.

"We're not allowed to make any comment," said Shelia Lee, one of the two investigators. She referred all inquiries to the committee's press aide in Washington.

The congressional panel, which has been looking into the King assassination as well as the assassinations of President John Kennedy and his brother Robert, said in an interim report that fellow inmates said Ray told them he intended to kill King "if the price is right."

The report quoted fellow inmates as saying Ray claimed he would look for a "businessmen's association" that he had heard was offering $100,000 for the civil rights leader's death once he escaped from the Missouri prison. The report said the panel intended to determine the validity of those statements.

Swenson, who served as warden at the main penitentiary from 1965 through 1973, said much of his interview covered the same information that has previously been made available about Ray's tenure in prison and his escape, "although it probably was a little more thorough and complete than in the past."

"I told them about his way of life in the pen, his actions, his affiliations, his friendships," Swenson said. "I tried to help in every way I could. It's one of those things you want to cooperate on, of course."

While he said he was unaware of providing the investigators with any new information on Ray, the former warden said that "when put with the total input of what they find out from the others they talk to it might help."

Wyrick, who said he expected the investigators to be in Jefferson City for at least several days, said he was unable to tell them very much.

"Of course, I didn't even know James Earl Ray when he was here. I was at another institution at the time," Wyrick said. "I just tried to help them out with some background information on some of the older inmates and on others who knew Ray who are deceased or have been discharged."

Ray escaped from the prison by hiding in a large bread tray being taken by truck from the institution. A year after that, King was shot and killed in Memphis and two months later Ray was arrested for the slaying in London.

Various federal and state investigations since the assassination have failed to turn up any evidence that prison officials assisted Ray in his escape or that Ray financed the assassination plan by illegal drug dealings with other inmates at the prison.

Disaster assistance available for elderly

Five liaison agents with the Area Agency on Aging are still on duty at the Senior Citizens Nutrition Site, 312 South Washington, to give disaster assistance to the elderly affected by the May 4 tornado.

Persons 60 years of age and older are urged to seek the assistance of the liaison agents, who are providing information and referral for disaster services. In some cases, the agents make direct contact with the proper agency.

A spokesman said Tuesday the agency is currently keeping tabs on 109 cases handles since the twister struck Sedalia.

Working in cooperation with the Federal Disaster Assistance Administration, the agents will man their local office through approximately Aug. 1 in an effort to ensure all relief possible has been obtained for elderly residents effected by the twister.

Debris removal, grants, contractors, housing and income assistance are some of the areas in which they can channel assistance.

Betty Kilgore, Warrensburg, is the field representative for the Area Agency on Aging, which covers 13 counties in west-central Missouri.

The Sedalia office is being manned from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. daily, Monday through Friday. Persons who cannot go by the office are asked to call 827-0944.

Carter caught in tug over B1 bomber plans

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, who plans to decide this month whether to approve development of the B1 bomber, is being tugged from opposite sides in a continuing argument over the airplane's value in a modern defense system.

The B1, say its proponents, is a necessary element in the U.S. arsenal, an airplane that can fly beneath radar screens to deliver its nuclear payload after the initial wave of missiles.

But, say its opponents, it costs too much, its job can be carried out by the existing fleet of B52 bombers, and, with adequate missiles, manned bombers are not needed.

Advocates of the bomber's development met with Carter on Tuesday. Its opponents are scheduled to meet with him Friday. And by the end of June, says Carter, "a basic judgment" on whether to proceed with the aircraft will be made.

The Pentagon sees the B1 as part of the defense system "triad," which includes sea-based and land-based missiles.

B1s would replace the B52s, built on technology from the 1950s. B52s now constitute the mainstay of the Air Force's bomber fleet. But opponents of the B1 say the B52s could be used into the 1990s.

After the President met Tuesday with House and Senate members who support the B1, Press Secretary Jody Powell said Carter was "open to arguments (that) there is some merit" in the advanced bomber.

Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., said after the meeting that Carter "is becoming convinced we can't live without the B1."

All this is in contrast with what Carter said during the presidential campaign last year, when he made clear his opposition to the bomber by calling it a wasteful project that should not be funded.

Powell said he couldn't say Goldwater was wrong in indicating Carter may be coming around to the thinking of the airplane's advocates.

"I can't guess where he's leaning," the spokesman said.

The Air Force wants a fleet of 244 B1s at a total anticipated cost of $24.8 billion — about $102 million for each bomber.

Two advisory board members are selected

Two more appointments were made to the Pettis County Fire Protection District Advisory Board at a board of directors meeting Tuesday night.

William R. Parkhurst, Route 3, and Dale Dirck, Beaman, were added to the five other board members to fill seven of the eight seats on the advisory board.

The other five members are Ralph Rehmer, Flat Creek Township; T.H. Gibson, Dresden; Mike Rains, Longwood; David Diotte, Maplewood; and J.D. Schlobohm, Route 2.

The advisory board was set up by the directors to help determine the needs of the fire district's patrons, advise on fire station locations and serve as liaison between the directors and the district residents.

The directors announced at the meeting that the district's new full-size pumper will be ready for delivery by mid-summer. It is currently being manufactured by Firemaster Fire Apparatus, Springfield.

Brooking Park returns its 100th resident

With a gift corsage to mark the occasion, Mrs. Eva Schrankler, 1019 West Seventh, was honored Wednesday morning as the 100th resident to return home after a temporary convalescent stay at the Brooking Park Geriatric Center, Route 6.

Mrs. Schrankler, a retired teacher, entered Brooking Park in late March after breaking a foot. During her stay at Brooking Park, which extended through the middle of May, she underwent successful rehabilitative therapy, a unique feature at the center.

Mrs. Schrankler said she was impressed with Brooking Park, particularly with the care and concern shown by center employes, the strong administrative and staff organization and the general state of cleanliness.

Participating in the ceremony honoring Mrs. Schrankler was Brooking Park president and co-founder, Hank Monsees, and Mrs. Kenda Bremer, head nurse and also acting administrator of the center.

☆ Downtown

prehensive plan was adopted by the commission last summer.

Other areas in which specific plans are proposed include the north side, 16th street, schools and parks, and a major street plan.

Berenyi said plans for those areas would also come from interested Sedalians.

"The first area of effort is the downtown area," Berenyi said. "One of the reasons for this is that there has always been considerable interest in it."

Berenyi said he hopes citizen involvement in plans for some of the areas named by the commission will help sell the total city plan.

"We feel one reason the Hare & Hare plan (a former city plan) was not adopted is that there was a feeling that it was handed down from above...the thoughts for that plan seemed to a lot of people to have been developed from outside our neighborhoods," said Berenyi.

He said the comprehensive plan must have citizen input to be adopted.

"We can sit here with Mr. Velharticky and draw something up and it will end up like the Hare & Hare Report, a volume in the library," said Berenyi. "That's not why we're doing this."

☆ Problem

sewage goes into a clarifier again and then into polishing lagoons before it is discharged into the Breakfast Branch.

"The problem is hydraulic. The plant is handling more water than it was designed to handle. The retention time through the plant is too short. Waste should be in the primary clarifier about two hours for effectiveness and now it's there for about 45 minutes," Johnson said.

For example, the Clean Water Commission's permit for the south plant for the biological oxygen demand (BOD) count allows about 30 parts per million. In tests run for the period of October through March, the count was 42.8 and for January through March, 65.

The permit also allows a 30 parts per million count for suspended solids to be discharged from the south plant. In tests run at the same times, the count was 41 at the end of December and 64 at the end of March.

The result is the foul odor residents along the creek have complained about in recent weeks.

a city the size of Sedalia should have," Righter said.

The country club board of directors voted overwhelmingly recently to either relocate the club or in some way share the facilities of another country club. Righter said Wednesday that Register and other board members are expected to meet informally with club representatives regarding the possible purchase of the club grounds and golf course by the city.

In other business, Righter told the board that storm damage at Hubbard Park totaled $11,000. The major refurbishing projects will include the construction of a new grandstand and new restrooms. Final arrangements have not yet been made with the insurance company, Righter said, and he does not know when the project will be completed.

Righter also presented a "preliminary, second-draft" proposed budget for consideration by the board. Righter said Wednesday his final budget request "will be more than last year's, but I don't know by how much yet."

Among the items called for in his tentative budget, Righter said, are two to three tennis practice areas which would consist of hard-surface areas with large backboards at the ends to strike balls against. If approved, the practice spots would probably be built on the north side of the tennis courts at Liberty Park.

House passes bill revising the Hatch Act

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal bureaucrats could run in next year's local, state and congressional elections for the first time in almost four decades under legislation passed by the House to revise the Hatch Act.

The measure approved Tuesday, 244-164, also would remove prohibitions that keep millions of federal workers from raising campaign funds or working for candidates in partisan elections.

The bill, which President Carter backs, faces a rougher time in the Senate. The Government Operations Committee has jurisdiction over the measure, and the panel's chairman, Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., has said previously he opposes it and will not push for its passage this year unless the House approves it by a large margin.

The bill would affect 2.8 million federal workers, three times as many as there were when the political restraints were applied in 1939 in an effort to eliminate political arm-twisting of federal workers by their bosses.

Political observers expect that the federal bureaucracy would be a potent political force because of the workers' experience and interest in government.

Republicans fear that a majority of workers would participate in Democratic campaigns. Democrats accounted for 222 of the 244 votes in favor of the bill, while Republicans cast 117 of 164 votes against it.

"This bill would only give federal workers the same rights that every other citizen has," Rep. William Clay, the bill's sponsor, said in arguing for passage.

Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., said, "2.8 million people are shut out of the political life of this country. It's time to change that."

Sun is their business

By WINIFRED I. COOK

SOUTH BRUNSWICK, N.J. (NEA) — Take a simple statistic.

The sun has gone down in the evening and come each morning every day since creation.

Yet, except for a few pioneering prophets sprinkled throughout history, only a crisis situation has made man look back to his original source of energy for an answer to some of his problems.

"Most people don't realize the potential of our sun," said Stella Andrassy of nearby Kingston. "Even some who do, merely decide it's too expensive, or something, to try to meet the crisis logically with this alternative method of energy."

With her husband, Mrs. Andrassy has been working on practical applications for solar energy for almost 25 year.

Mrs. Andrassy, who fled Communist oppression in Hungary, said, "There are two major problems facing our world today. One is that we are choking on the waste materials created by the industrial age, and the other is that we are close to the end of the fuel supply that keeps those machines running."

She said the nearing of the earth's inhabitants to scraping the bottom of the energy barrel has awakened some to realizing that the orange-colored ball in the sky may hold the key to survival itself.

Mrs. Andrassy and her husband, Count Imre Andrassy, met when he was a military attache to her native Sweden, from Hungary.

When the Communists took over Hungary, the Andrassys emigrated to the United States. After their arrival in this country, Mrs. Andrassy, who speaks seven languages fluently, met Dr. Maria Telkes, a pioneer in the solar energy field.

As a journalist, she asked Dr. Telkes to help her write a book on solar energy. Because of her writings, Curtis-Wright Corp., then located near Trenton, invited Mrs. Andrassy to become a member of the staff. This was in 1958.

The corporation constructed a 100 per cent solar-heated house, with the water and heating system developed by Mrs. Andrassy. The house, built in Clarksville, was subsequently purchased by the Shell Oil Co., and the solar house was torn down.

The Andrassys purchased a five-acre tract and home in Kingston, so she could be close to her employment. They began working in earnest on development of solar devices.

Stella Andrassy . . . using sun to bake cake

The Count is a mechanical engineer, and together the couple has constructed — and holds patents on — solar cooking ovens, solar water heaters and a solar dehydrator. The instruments are ready for mass production.

Another project conceived by Mrs. Andrassy is being given serious consideration in a pilot program in Princeton. Sewage sludge is being turned into fertilizer and distilled water. One 320-square-foot solar still has been in use for more than a year.

She recalled how the project got started. "I knew it would work, but I needed some sludge to work with," she said. So this regal woman with her clear, blue eyes, walked to the door of the Princeton sewage plant and knocked on the door.

"I asked them if I could borrow some sludge." With her deep, throaty laugh, she said, "They were happy to give it to me...all I wanted."

The Princeton sewage treatment plant spews forth some three million gallons of sludge daily. For more than 40 years, sludge from Central New Jersey communities has been disposed of by dumping into the Atlantic Ocean. It has become an increasing problem, since more and more sewage treatment plants are being constructed as people move from urban centers. The effluent is endangering the beaches and creating a dead sea dumping ground.

Mrs. Andrassy provided a solution which involves an especially-designed solar still. From it, she extracts pure drinking water, and a top grade fertilizer, rich in needed minerals, like phosphorous and nitrogen, from the sludge. "And the cost is relatively small," Mrs. Andrassy said.

Another project which has brought pleasure to the Andrassys is their Solar Dehydrator. They dry fruits, vegetables, fish and other items by utilizing the sun.

Since they grow most of their own food in their backyard garden, they use the fruits of their labors. Mrs. Andrassy said last year's grape harvest was "magnificent." She made great amounts of raisins, and said, "With the price of raising what they are, it is a great savings to use the sun."

The Andrassys make much use of the solar oven they developed, and Mrs. Andrassy said she bakes breads and other foods on bright days. "You just have to plan ahead, and cook things when it's sunny in this area. I just heat them up on a regular stove on cloudy days, but even that is a saving," she said.

The Andrassys have dreams too.

The couple wants to donate three acres of their property to establish the Sol-El Institute, as a center for exchanging information on solar and other modes of renewable energy.

"We have collected so much information, and it would be a shame for future generations not to have it," Mrs. Andrassy said.

As the couple envisions it, there would be an exhibition area where working models of existing solar devices would be displayed. Mrs. Andrassy said, "Our land has been designated as an area for research and light industry, so the location is ideal. So-El Institute would coordinate the development of technical and economic information, as well as marketing approaches."

She added, "The combination of solar energy and windpower could solve so many of our nation's present problems. I could save the United States millions of barrels of oil each day."

Platte County to appeal ruling

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Platte County has asked its attorneys to appeal a U.S. District Court ruling that places restrictions on the use of its old jail until a new facility can be built.

Ruling Friday, U.S. District Judge John W. Oliver said the jail could be used only as a pretrial holding facility and inmates could not be kept there longer than seven days.

The Platte County Court, the administrative authority in the county, Tuesday asked attorneys to appeal the ruling to the 8th Circuit Court of Appeals in St. Louis.

Missouri House delays final action

Criminal code revamp focuses on homosexuality, pornography

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Missouri House and Senate have agreed in principle to reduce homosexuality from a felony to a misdemeanor in the proposed revision of the state's 142-year-old criminal laws.

The House has also added to the Senate-approved version of the measure strict penalties for promoting child pornography, which if accepted by the Senate would make Missouri the first state to approve legal sanctions against "the purveyors of this filth," according to backers.

But after nearly seven hours of debate on the massive 328-page bill on Tuesday and adoption of 27 of 31 proposed modifications, the House delayed any final action on the measure. Debate was scheduled to resume later Wednesday with about 10 more proposed amendments awaiting floor consideration.

The differences between the House and Senate versions will have to be worked out by a joint legislative committee before the bill is returned to both houses for a final vote.

While the House reworded the Senate's provision on penalties for homosexuality and other sexual acts outside of marriage, both versions call for homosexuality to be considered only a misdemeanor, subject to a maximum penalty of a $500 fine and a year in jail. Current state law makes homosexuality a felony with a minimum prison term of two years.

But the House rejected a proposal to completely eliminate legal sanctions on sexual conduct between consenting adults, backers were able to muster only 28 supporters. The action came as Miami, Fla., voters repealed a local ordinance guaranteeing homosexuals equal rights in a referendum that gained national attention.

"To equate conduct between consenting adults with a crime wave is nonsense," said Rep. Mark Youngdahl, D-St. Joseph, who led the unsuccessful drive. "There are no victims here. This is the time we should be mobilizing our forces against crimes where there are victims."

Youngdahl said he was unaware of any convictions for violation of the state's current laws.

But Independence Democrat Glen Binger, leading opponents of the move, called Youngdahl's proposal "absolutely atrocious."

"This is opening the door and putting the foot in to the first step toward legalizing (homosexual) marriages and adoptions," Binger said, calling for homosexuality to remain a felony. "We want to keep this beautiful state of Missouri clean and there's no place for them (homosexuals) here."

House Speaker Kenneth Rothman and Asst. Republican Floor Leader Jack Buechner combined to add the strict penalty sections for child pornography, contending it will keep child pornographers out of Missouri.

"I don't think the guarantees of freedom of speech or freedom of the press ever envisioned this kind of insidious behavior," Rothman said. Conviction of promoting child pornography could mean imprisonment for life under the House provisions.

"It's got to be the worst method of making a dirty buck I have seen," the speaker said. "The production of child pornography is a form of murder."

Recent investigations have uncovered a nationwide network for child pornography, prompting consideration of penalties for the activity in a number of states as well as in Congress.

The overall revision bill is intended to update and simplify the state's criminal code, and it avoids making substantial changes in criminal statutes. Proposals to recodify the criminal laws have cleared the House in the past but have been stalled in the Senate. With a week still remaining in the session and general agreement between the two houses on most of the bill, however, it is expected to reach Gov. Joseph Teasdale, who has made it a priority.

Among changes in the law agreed to by both houses is an increase from $50 to $150 in the value of goods before stealing becomes a felony, stricter provisions concerning rape, criminal sanctions for both prostitutes and their customers and uniform standardized categories of crimes and punishments.

Under the Senate version, the new code would go into effect in September 1978 while the House has delayed implementation until January 1979, a discrepency that must be worked out by the joint panel.

'Speedy trial' bill backers may accept weaker version

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — House backers of expedited criminal trials say they may accept a watered-down version of their proposal approved by the Senate.

But Rep. William O'Toole, sponsor of the so-called "speedy trials" bill in the House, says he wants to consider the Senate version, passed 20-9 on Tuesday, before making a decision.

The Senate also approved and returned to the House a proposed constitutional amendment to allow municipalities to join with each other or with private utilities or cooperatives to issue revenue bonds to finance utility service for their residents.

The Senate, however, tacked on to the House-approved version of the measure requirements that any such joint utility ventures financed by revenue bonds be regulated by the Missouri Public Service Commission. A similar provision was rejected by the House earlier this year.

The Senate version of the speedy trials bill would require a person to be brought to trial within 120 days of his arraignment with the time limitation going into effect in September 1978. The House version, which would become effective this Sept. 28, phased trial limitations in over three years so trials would have to start within 90 days of arraignment once it was fully implemented.

Critics in the House claim the bill will only cause the state to authorize more judges and prosecutors for the urban areas to meet the time limits while Senate opponents contended trial delays were not a problem in rural Missouri.

Backers of the bill, patterned after the federal speedy trials law, say they may accept the Senate version as a "starting point" with hopes of tightening up the time limitations in the future. They say that most persons are now brought to trial within 120 days.

The proposed constitutional amendment authorizing municipal pooling for utility service would have to be approved by voters in 1978 if it clears the legislature.

Backers of the proposal claim it would enable many municipalities to continue providing utility service despite soaring costs as well as begin work on major energy projects that are too expensive for individual private utilities or cooperatives to undertake alone.

"This bill has a potential for helping the state of Missouri," said Sen. A. Clifford Jones, R-Ladue. "If we pass it, we can probably do something with coal gasification and other things that will benefit the state."

But supporters have also contended that the requirement for PSC regulation of such projects is an attempt to keep municipalities from offering inexpensive service and posing a major competitive threat to private utilities. Private utilities have opposed the House version of the measure.

Municipal utility operations are not now regulated by the PSC and cooperative utilities are regulated by the federal government.

Insurance measure advances

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — After four years of attempts to bring credit life insurance transactions under state regulation, that measure has cleared one of its few remaining legislative hurdles.

A joint legislative compromise panel boosted the bill to the House and Senate floors Tuesday after five meetings which had some House conferees concerned about the bill's chances of surviving the compromise discussion.

"We were getting worried about the bill," says Rep. Bud Fendler, D-St. Louis. "In the beginning ... we couldn't even get to first base."

But after a tradeoff on the bill, negotiators signed the compromise and it went to the chamber floor where it must still be finally approved before before being sent to Gov. Joseph P. Teasdale for his signature.

Under the measure, the state director of insurance would be allowed to regulate commissions and premiums on credit life and disability insurance transactions in Missouri.

Premiums could be cut by as much as 25 per cent, state insurance officials say, because some credit insurance agents now charge as much as 80 per cent commissions.

Credit life and disability insurance is designed to insure that a loan will be repaid if the borrower dies or is disabled and cannot meet his financial commitment.

Lawmakers on the compromise panel haggled over two provisions in the bill before accepting it as the final version.

One controversial provision, which was eliminated from the bill by the panel, would have extended the regulation of credit life insurance to out-of-state companies. That provision had been wanted by House members of the committee, but they conceded in order to win the Senate over on another provision.

The other part of the bill, which was accepted by the panel, would allow only the dollar amount of claims paid by an insurance company to be deducted from its revenues for purposes of figuring the rate at which it could write credit insurance.

If insurance companies paid out a high percentage of their revenues in claims, for example, the state insurance director could increase the credit insurance rates. And if the company's other operating costs were allowed deducted from revenues for figuring rates, still higher rates would be allowed, state insurance officials say.

Legislative Highlights

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Here are the highlights of Tuesday's activity in the Missouri Legislature:

Senate

—Gave final approval and sent to the governor a revised school school foundation formula.

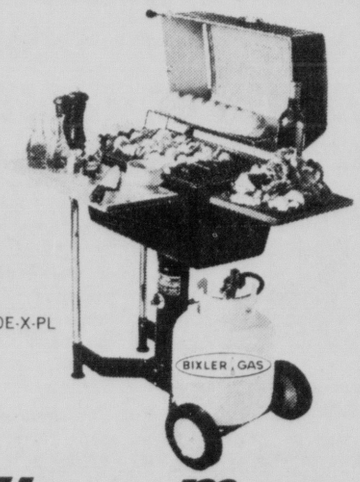

—Approved and sent back to the House for further consideration a resolution allowing municipalities to pool their resources to provide utility services, a bill limiting the defense attorney's ability to introduce evidence about a victim's prior sexual conduct in rape prosecution cases and a measure requiring judges, prosecutors and defense attorneys to bring criminal cases to trial more quickly.

House

—Worked throughout the day on the massive recodification of the state's criminal code, considering more than two dozen amendments to it.

Another Carter among three young governors?

Delaware Gov. Pierre S. duPont IV

By DAVE GOLDBERG
Associated Press Writer

If they had lived in medieval times, they would be dukes — two of them descended from noble houses, the third gaining a fiefdom by vanquishing his enemies.

In the 201st year of the United States of America, they are young governors newly elevated and hoping, perhaps, to be elevated another step or two some day. Jay Rockefeller of West Virginia and Pete duPont of Delaware, of oil and chemical fortunes. Jim Thompson of Illinois, prosecutor of Democratic politicians.

Six-foot-six James R. Thompson fashions an image as "Jim" or "Big Jim." Pierre S. duPont IV is "Pete." John Davison Rockefeller IV is "Jay."

Thompson's high school yearbook noted his prediction that he would be president by 1984, and his election last fall immediately made him a presidential prospect in a Republican party short on young talent. A 30-year-old Jay Rockefeller was being portrayed a decade ago as a potential president. Pete duPont, newer to notoriety, is already an important national figure among moderate Republicans.

But future elevation depends on present performance, and state government is not an easy arena. Predictably, the three dukes — just over 40 or about to get there — are familiar already with realities quite opposite from the promises of campaign rhetoric.

Jim Thompson made a reputation as U.S. attorney in Chicago, where he successfully prosecuted a variety of politicians. His most prominent convictee was the late Otto Kerner, one-time Democratic governor and federal appeals judge, who was jailed for accepting racetrack stock illegally.

Governing a state, particularly a state with the convoluted politics of Illinois, is not as single-track a job as prosecuting a criminal, and a governor must take positions.

Shortly before taking the oath as governor, Thompson said he supported proposals to increase salaries for legislators and other state officials, including the governor. That didn't sit particularly well with the electorate and Thompson dropped his support after noting that he had been flooded with mail denouncing the raises by a 300-1 ratio.

Thompson's style is, like many of the nation's younger politicians, consciously informal. He pushes his austerity program with classroom-style briefings — using a large notepad mounted on a tripod — to civic groups, chambers of commerce, Republican clubs and other local groups.

There is also a shade of the conscious anti-politician. Sam Gove, director of the Institute of Government and Public Affairs at the University of Illinois, says of the governor's cabinet appointments:

"The ones I know aren't the headline-hunter types. They are technicians and professionals and probably will get the job done nicely."

It is incumbent on Thompson to do nicely fairly quickly. He has to run again in November of next year under a change in the Illinois Constitution switching gubernatorial elections to non-presidential years.

Jay Rockefeller is hardly your normal, everyday West Virginian. Born in New York, educated at Harvard, a Far East scholar who studied in Japan and traveled extensively in Asia. He is in West Virginia, he has said quite frankly, to obtain a political base.

A Democrat from a Republican family, Rockefeller got his political start in an administrative job with the Peace Corps during the Kennedy Administration. Much like his uncle Winthrop, who moved to Arkansas and subsequently became governor, Rockefeller looked for a state outside what he called the New York-Washington axis.

A friend recommended West Virginia, and in 1964 a job was arranged through then-Attorney General Robert Kennedy with an arm of the Presidential Commission on Juvenile Delinquency.

From there, there were quick stops in the legislature and as secretary of state, and by 1968, Rockefeller was being thought of as a presidential prospect. That prospect wasn't hurt by his marriage to Sharon Percy, daughter of the Republican senator from Illinois, the American equivalent of a royal wedding.

West Virginia Gov. John D. Rockefeller IV

Rockefeller lost his race for governor in 1972, a bad year for Democrats. He settled in as president of West Virginia Wesleyan University and ran again last year, winning by a margin of nearly 2-1.

West Virginia is a poor state, treated harshly by the elements. Rockefeller's first months in office were beset with problems of the kind described in insurance policies as "an act of God."

The bitterly cold winter hit West Virginia especially hard. There were gas and oil shortages and river ice jams that prevented reserves from being floated up rivers on barges, forcing plants and schools to close. Then there were flash floods — the worst in southern West Virginia in 20 years.

He also had to deal with a legislature that despite Democratic majorities of 28-6 in the Senate and 91-9 in the House balked at enacting his first priority: exemption of food from the 3 per cent state sales tax.

Pete duPont is what Jay Rockefeller might have been had he stuck to his family's traditional Republican persuasion.

Out of Harvard law school by way of Princeton, duPont worked only briefly for the huge family chemical concern, the most important single political and economic factor in the small state of Delaware. He served one term in the state House and three as Delaware's only Congressman before being elected governor last fall.

DuPont's House record was solid moderate-to-liberal Republican. He got high ratings from the liberal Republican Ripon Society, moderately high ratings from the liberal Americans for Democratic Action and relatively low marks (36 per cent in 1974) from the conservative Americans for Constitutional Action.

In his campaign, duPont pledged to do away with patronage politics. His cabinet is professional and he has signed an order setting up a screening committee to recommend judicial appointments and take judgeships out of politics.

But relations with the legislature, controlled by Democrats, started off badly because duPont miffed leaders of both parties by failing to discuss cabinet appointments with them in advance of appointment.

Some aides blame that on duPont's staff — young, idealistic, and unused to a system in which you can keep a legislator happy by slapping him on the back before you do the opposite of what he's advised.

In any case, duPont plays to the public more than to the legislature, sometimes with unforseen consequences.

In early March, in a speech outlining spending cuts and new taxes, he used the word "bankrupt" to described Delaware's financial condition. The next day, investors deluged the governor's office with calls, and several weeks later, Delaware's bond rating was lowered from A to Baa-1, lowest for any state in the nation.

The governor's office maintains there is no danger of the state defaulting, but does not retract the "bankrupt" statement. DuPont says the state faces a deficit of about $56 million for the fiscal year that ends June 30 and will have to borrow to make it up.

Dan Walker of Illinois was voted out of office last year. Brendan Byrne of New Jersey is in trouble this year. Ella Grasso of Connecticut is being denounced across the state. The bright new governors of the past few years have governed their states and are no longer bright new governors.

Illinois Gov. James Thompson

But Jimmy Carter, Georgia, class of '70, is in the White House.

It raises some interesting possibilities for Rockefeller, duPont and Thompson.

Soil, water district to hold meeting

MARSHALL — The Saline Soil and Water Conservation District will meet at 8 p.m. June 14 in the multipurpose building on the Saline County Fairgrounds here to establish long-range plans and goals.

Orman S. Meador, Sweet Springs, chairman of the district, urges the public to attend the session. The district will attempt to identify long-range problems and needs of the county for the next 20 to 40 years, he said.

Proper development and use of natural resources consistent with environmental quality; protection of our prime agricultural land from irreversible land use; minimizing natural disasters and elimination of disasters caused by improper development; and promotion of organized, coordinated growth in cities and rural areas will be the key discussion topics.

Brazil nuts grow in clusters of from 14 to 28 and are packed inside a large, hard, round shell as big as a man's head.

Life changes fast for world's last big roundup

By HUGH MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

LAKSELV, Norway (AP) — As the spring unlocks the Northland comes the Lapp now with his reindeer, with his wife and with his brothers, and his big piled high snow scooter to the pasture of his fathers, over tundra fast and frozen, full in flight from fat mosquito ...

Since Longfellow took the meter of "Hiawatha" from an old Lapp love song, reborrowing the refrain seems an apt way to begin the saga of the world's last great migration: The annual trek of thousands of reindeer across northern Norway and Sweden to the sea.

It's roundup time above the Arctic Circle right now. The sun has come back. Lapp reindeer herders are loading sleds, rounding up the strays with lassos and blood-curdling oaths, stuffing their reindeer skin boots with sedge grass for the several weeks journey over desolate, storm-swept tundras, across wide ice-filled rivers from inland winter pastures 200 miles to summer pastures by the sea.

The spring migration no longer is a mystery. Scientists now know what the Lapps have known for centuries. The herd moves to get away from the murderous mosquitos of the tundra and the midges that lay eggs in the mouth and nose of the reindeer. Gadflies nest on their backs and gnats eat the soft fat under their eyes. Reindeer die if they don't make it to the sea and its soothing salt water. In summer pasture they have calves and graze on sweet grass and fungus after months of kicking through ice to get at mosses and lichens.

Both the world's Lapp and reindeer populations are increasing, but life on the openest of all open roads is changing fast.

More than the TV antennas festoon almost every Lapp home. The snow scooter for better and worse is changing the traditional Lapp way of life.

In Santa land, Donner and Blitzen are giving way to Yamaha and Skidoo, easing the herder's work and bringing the trading post within three or four hours, instead of three or four days.

For worse, the snow scooter has opened up Lapp hunting and fishing grounds, and the wild game and fish on which they depend for a living are being depleted by tourists, many from far-off lands.

Hydroelectric projects along the Lakselv and Altaelv rivers are usurping pasture lands, cutting off reindeer routes to the sea with huge dams, bringing new settlements and roads, and more outsiders.

"Electric power is desperately needed in north Norway, but the schemes are destroying reindeer pastures and the ptarmigan grounds. Up to this time the young had been staying at home following the old skills, but now they are going off to jobs in Oslo," said Johan Kalstad, curator of Lapp ethnography at the Tromso Museum. Three years ago Johan was a reindeer herder.

The Lapps find themselves ace to wind in a cultural blizzard that threatens to bury their ethnic identity and blur the path to a proud minority role in modern society. Lapps regret the tourist invasion but pack up their tents and migrate, as instinctively as the reindeer, to tourists haunts to sell their souvenirs.

According to most estimates, there are about 50,000 Lapps in the world. Two-thirds live in north Norway and the rest are scattered across Sweden, Finland and Russia's Kola peninsula. Less than 3 per cent today trap or engage in reindeer herding. Many are farmers, fishermen, laborers in industry.

Over the centuries they have been pushed further north and away from the coasts by Viking kings and plundered and exploited by traders and tax collectors from the four countries that drew boundaries around their traditional lands. Sometimes the border was so contested or indistinct, Lapps were jailed for paying taxes to a rival country. But times are changing.

Norwegian courts are accepting Lapp land claims and awarding compensation. Sweden has a civil ombudsman exclusively looking after Lapp interests. Norway and Finland have repudiated 19th Century government policies of erasing "Lappishness" by forcing this colorful minority to adopt national language and dress.

At the end of the last century nationalist movements in Norway brought about a law stipulating that state-owned lands, largely inhabited by Lapps, could be granted only to those who could read, write and speak Norwegian in their daily life. Now in the interior of Finmark county, where the Lapps are in the majority, they have their own schools and learn Norwegian as a foreign language.

In Finland a movement has been launched to set up a national state for Lapps from all four countries at the top of the world, but it has little support. Lapp society has never been very organized. There is no tribal system. Several families who hunt or migrate together form a "siida," a family grouping, presided over by a council of elders.

Some Lapps try to conceal their identity and merge with the dominant Norwegian culture. Others, especially the new breed of young militants, proclaim ethnic individuality and proudly wear the Lapp costume, a traditional dark blue tunic richly embroidered with braid.

With more than 100,000 reindeer still pawing at the tundra and reindeer meat a gourmet item selling at 58 cents (U.S.) a pound at the slaughterhouse, the traditional Lapp greeting of "pouris, pouris" will be heard for quite a while in these Arctic parts.

And, come spring, so will the roar of snow scooters in this once silent vastness as reindeer herders seek out the "stallos," the troll stones marking out the reindeer pastures along the trail.

Different world

These four Lapp boys in Norway are growing up in a world very different from that of their ancestors. The traditional way of life is changing fast for the 50,000 or so Lapps in the world. The populations of both the Lapps and their reindeer are growing, but so are the threats to Lapp ethnic identity.

Reader asks about lungs

Dear Dr. Lamb — There is much talk today of lungs, but there are some answers I never get.

In an active child or super athlete do the lungs grow larger than they do in one who spends much time just watching TV or reading?

If a mature person with large lung capacity leads an inactive life does he or she breathe less deeply? Do parts of the lungs go dead?

Does the blood from say the hands, get renewed by going to a certain part of the lungs only?

When one lung is removed can the other really do a complete job?

We read of over ventilation, what happens with under ventilation?

Dear Reader — The lungs have a range of capacity. When you are sitting still you need far less oxygen than when you are jogging. In those circumstances the lungs need ventilate only as much air as needed to provide that small amount of oxygen. When you are exercising or working hard the body needs more oxygen and the lungs exchange more air to provide the increased amount of oxygen.

Since the lungs are really storage chambers for air it is true that exercising them to the maximum capacity will help improve their capacity. That is why a vigorous athlete tends to have a greater lung capacity than a sedentary individual. This won't make any difference when they are both sitting still but the guy with unexercised lungs may not be able to sustain as much vigorous work for a long period of time as the athlete. However this effect is not noticed with short periods of exertion.

No, parts of the lung do not go dead from lack of use but the capacity to stretch to the maximum might be limited.

No, blood from the hands or any particular part of the body does not go to just one part of the lung. All of the oxygen-poor blue-blood collects in the right side of the heart and is mixed there. All of this blood is then carried to the lungs through one artery — the pulmonary artery which divides into smaller and smaller arteries to distribute the mixed blood to the lungs.

When a lung is removed it simply limits the amount of lung available to exchange air. The remaining healthy lung is quite adequate to provide ventilation and oxygen exchange for all of the mixed oxygen-poor blood at rest and with reasonable amounts of exertion. As the amount of lung tissue is removed the effect is really noticed in the limitation of the amount of exertion that a person can do.

To give you more information on how the lungs work I am sending you The Health Letter number 2-4, Keeping Your Lungs Fit. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it.

Underventilation leads to a build up of carbon dioxide in the body. This affects the chemical balance and can cause an increased tendency to sleep. You sometimes see this in very overweight people. In extreme underventilation as with emphysema the build-up eventually can cause very serious problems.

Because of the volume of mail Dr. Lamb cannot answer your letters personally but he will answer representative letters of general interest in his column. Write to him in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. (NEA)

Carter appoints ex-Litton aide

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter has asked the Senate to confirm the appointment of Pat Danner of Gladstone, Mo., as federal cochairman of the Ozarks Regional Commission.

Mrs. Danner, who ran for Congress in 1976, was administrative assistant to the late Rep. Jerry Litton, D-Mo., for three years.

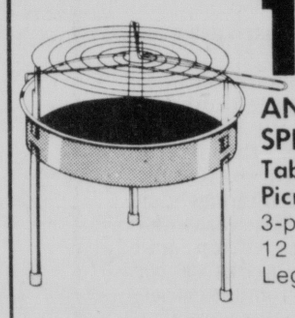

The commission is a state-federal planning and development agency for Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Lousiana.

Faces of fear

A pair of cotton-top tamarin monkeys huddle nervously on their perch as if they know their species is now on the list of rare and endangered species. No one knows quite how many tamarins are left in the world. Most of them inhabit the tropical forests in the Andean foothills of Colombia, which are dwindling as man farms more and more of the area. There are probably about 500 tamarins in captivity in the U.S. (AP)

Frail tamarin seeks survival

By JOHN BARBOUR
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Mother Nature isn't kind, and fear makes a creature mean.

And when that piercing screech echoes through the forest, it's probably frightened Patrick Cotton-Top, reacting again.

In reality the cry is small, as befits this frail monkey. Patrick and his kin, the cotton-top tamarins, occupy only six one-thousandths of the earth's surface. Yet their province is shrinking.

This year Patrick and his nervous, excitable fellows have made it to one of the least distinguished lists in the world, a kind of "Who Almost Isn't Who," the Red Data Book of Rare and Endangered Species.

Patrick, if he's still around, is only 25 inches long, and 15 inches of that is tail. He weighs less than a pound and a half. His offspring are only four inches long, but they are the most important things in his life, the very nature of survival.

Pat Neyman, 36, a researcher at the University of California at Berkeley, hopes to visit the slice of Colombian forest this summer to look up Patrick again, see how he and his cohorts are doing.

She's tagged and observed cotton-top tamarins for a while now and charted the dwindling forests they inhabit. She wonders how many there are and whether they can survive the intrusions of men chopping down trees for farms and trapping the wee monkeys for zoos and medical research.

Ten to 14 per cent of them come down naturally with cancer of the colon, and therefore make interesting models for study of the disease.

This year, more than a dozen creatures were added to the list of 294 mammals and 312 birds considered rare and endangered. Others in this class of 1977 include the Mediterranean mouflon, which is a small version of a wild sheep, the Northern bottlenose whale and four kinds of flying fox.

Ms. Neyman, who prefers that designation, is devoting her attention to the tamarins. They travel in groups of three to 13, acting like a family even though they might not be.

To identify the members of groups, Ms. Neyman gave them names — Aaron, Bartholomew, Calvin, all the way to Xavier. In between somewhere was Patrick.

She saw Patrick carrying a dead infant around for two hours. It is the nature of the male to carry the babies on their loping jaunts through the trees.

Even when they are facing off against a threatening intruder, raising the white topknot that gives them their name, they break off the encounter from time to time to check on the babies in the tree where they have left them.

Rarely is the monkey seen by man as other tamarins see themselves. That small black face, coursed by white streaks, the long black-tipped tail, the white belly fur, the brownish overcoat, are almost always seen by man and other strangers in anger or fear. So unsure of the world is he, he rarely is seen in a placid state.

There are probably 500 of the tamarins in captivity in the United States, and the number in the 13,000 square miles of forests it inhabits in Colombia is unknown. What is known is that up to 40,000 of them were exported in just 15 years. Native Colombians trap them for pets.

Men want to farm the tropical forests in the Andean foothills where most of the tamarins live. The monkeys manage pretty well even in secondary forests and scrub country. They need the trees not only for food, but for protection. They manage to jump from fence post to fence post. But that is not their native world, and they are in danger of disappearing forever.

Area kidney fund drives collect $455

The "Gift of Life" drive held recently in rural Pettis County raised $455.50 for the Kidney Foundation of Kansas and Western Missouri, according to Mrs. Nadine Hofstetter, drive chairwoman.

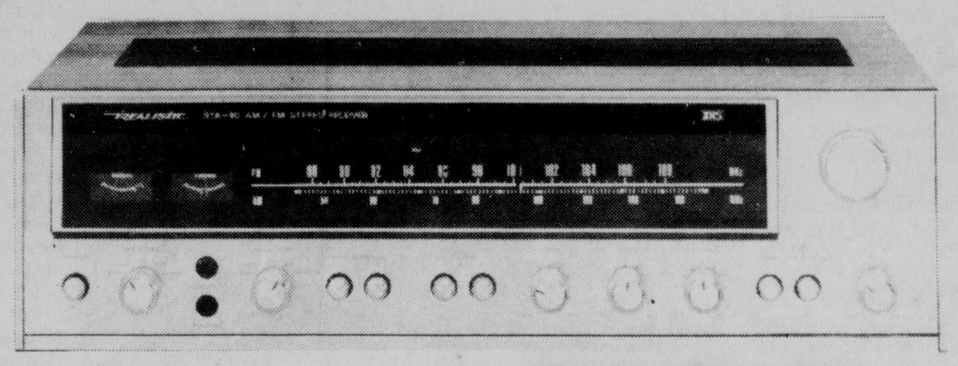

Funds collected in the drive will be used for the Foundation's programs involving kidney disease reaserch, transplantation, public and professional education.

All rural residents who still have drive kits in their possession are asked to mail them to the Metro Chapter office, 3600 Broadway, Suite 6A, Kansas City, Mo., 64111, as soon as possible.

Computer 'blackboard' breaks down time, distance barriers

Computer

"Whenever there's a telephone, you can plug into your computer and your conferences and go to work," explains Dr. Starr Roxanne Hiltz of Upsala College. On a sunny day she plugs in the telephone and the portable computer terminal beside the pool at her home in Scotch Plains, N.J., and goes to work in Newark, 12 miles away where the centralized computer is. Dr. Hiltz, who is helping to develop this new system, called computerized conferencing, is taking part in an experimental program being conducted from the New Jersey Institute of Technology in Newark. (AP)

By BRIAN SULLIVAN
AP Science Writer

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Think of it as one giant electronic "blackboard" in the sky, with scientists from all over the country working on it whenever they want to.

The "blackboard" is a new computer system — called computerized conferencing — an alternative to the use of paper, designed to break down the barriers of time and distance.

An experimental program of this kind, involving 221 individuals in 33 groups of investigators, is just going into operation at the New Jersey Institute of Technology. It is aimed at providing new forms of communication in science and technology, but similar systems may some day reach right into your living room.

This system employs terminals around the country tied to a centralized computer system at NJIT by ordinary telephone. It allows scientists to send messages to each other. It gives each one a personal "notebook." It replaces face-to-face contact at time-consuming conventions.

Beyond all this, those directing the project say that computerized conferencing will have more common, everyday uses in the future. It waits for the price to come down as equipment is mass produced.

This big public blackboard could be used for widespread education, recreation, town meetings.

"Any such applications of computerized conferencing systems would be likely to lead to widespread changes in work patterns and lifestyles," says Dr. Starr Roxanne Hiltz of Upsala College, who is working with Dr. Murray Turoff, a computer scientist and designer of the system.

"There is no reason why one's terminal, and thus place of work, has to be separate in time and space from one's place of living or leisure. Wherever there's a telephone, you can plug into your computer and your conferences and go to work, whenever it suits you.

"This is especially important for women," Dr. Hiltz says, "to facilitate time budgeting between family and career. If you can work in your own home, whenever it suits you, there won't be those minor crises that make it so difficult for the parent responsible for child care, such as what to do when the baby sitter doesn't come or if your school-age child is sick. One will be able to stay home near the children and work."

He says computer conferencing will mean more substitution of communication for transportation for all white collar workers.

For the immediate future, however, the system will provide more efficient scientific communication. It is built with the idea of the "invisible college" in mind: Informal groupings of scientists whose interests transcend their own universities and link them with scientists in the same field across the country.

Members of these "invisible colleges" communicate now by telephone, mail, journals, at meetings. The new computer system, called EIES or "eyes," (for Electronic Information Exchange System) is built for this need.

The new system, supported by the National Science Foundation, has four major features:

1. A message system. Any member can send a message to any other or all. It can be informal or temporary. A message will wait for the recipient to sign in on the system at his or her leisure. The message system is economically competitive with the telephone and mail.

2. The conference, a running series of short papers and discussions on a specific topic. The computer replaces a three-hour or three-day seminar. Or the computer conference could run on for weeks or months, with members signing in and contributing when they choose.

3. The notebook. Right now, each participant has space for his or her personal use, for composing scientific papers, for example. "It's the private space of the individual, but you can authorize any others to read five pages of it," says Dr. Turoff. "Instead of Xeroxing it and mailing it out, they just get it."

4. The bulletin, or journal. When an article is ready, the author notifies a human editor, who sends it to "referees" for evaluation. The paper could be "published" on the computer the next week or even the next day, on the screen or as a print-out.

There are other features:

—Pen name. When discussing someone else's paper, for example, you can use a pen name for anonymity. This is to encourage critical or controversial ideas and comments.

—Hal Zylog. Hal, whose name is from the computer in the movie "Space Odyssey, 2001," is a microprocessor — a sort of computer within a computer. Hal is being programmed to perform a number of services, such as talking to other computers by dialing them to get certain desired information.

The experimental program at Newark is to last for three to five years.

The cost estimates so far? Only $8 an hour for each user for nationwide communications, cheaper than a long-distance phone call. For 800 or more users, that would drop to under $5. The cost of a terminal should drop enough by 1980 to begin opening up the possibility of widespread home terminals, the scientists say.

SFCC awareness subject of study

Local and area school board members keep informed on State Fair Community College primarily through the news media while high school seniors learn about the college mostly from other students, according to a report released recently by SFCC history professor Dr. Larry Ament.

Ament interviewed 275 high school students in the college district and 47 members of various school boards. The observations recorded in his study, Ament wrote, hold "important implications for the future of the college." Ament completed the study in partial fulfillment of the requirements for his doctorate degree, which he received recently from the University of Arkansas.

Forty three per cent of the students interviewed plan to attend SFCC, with more seniors living closer to the college expressing this desire than those living further away. Fifty nine per cent of the Sedalia seniors interviewed plan to attend SFCC. In Pettis County outside Sedalia, this figure is 36 per cent and in Benton County it is 28 per cent.

Sedalia seniors interviewed were more knowledgeable about SFCC's practices and administration than were the remaining Pettis County seniors and seniors in Benton County. Despite this, however, "there was no difference in agreement with the mission of SFCC among the three groups of seniors. All three groups agreed strongly with (this) mission," Ament reported.

"Taken as a whole," he continued, "the seniors had high opinions of State Fair Community College." Ament then noted that, as might be expected, the most favorable comments came from students who plan to attend the college.

Generally speaking, Ament stated, adults he interviewed were "more knowledgeable about SFCC than the high school seniors." While all board members agreed strongly with the college's mission, Ament detected a relationship between their opinions and the distance they lived from the college campus. "In short," he reported, "the closer SFCC is to the school district, the more important board members perceived it to be."

Garden clubs schedule tours

Members of the Sedalia Council of Garden Clubs will open their gardens Friday afternoon for tours by the public.

Gardens which will be open to visitors after 3 p.m. Friday afternoon are Mrs. Julia Weikal, 2202 West First; Mrs. R. L. Fingland, 1715 West 11th; Mrs. Amy Acker, 800 East 24th; Mrs. Milton Irwin, 1803 South Washington; Mrs. Andrew Bordoli, 1814 West Fifth; Mrs. Nick Knutz, Route 6 (about 4200 South Ingram); Mrs. R. W. Boucknecht, 1908 South Ingram; Mrs. Walter Barnes, 1500 West Fourth; Mrs. Paul R. Nightingale, 409 South Park; Mrs. Fred Wertz Sr., 1715 West 14th.

Each of the six Sedalia garden clubs chose two gardens to be open for the tour, however a few of the members had to withdraw from the list following weather damage to their gardens.

Polly's pointers

Prevalent plight of polyester

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY — I work for a company that distributes catalogues. My Pet Peeve is with those people who send in requests written so sloppily that often it is impossible to read either the name or address. Those of you who do this please write legibly, print or use a typewriter. This would certainly make things easier on both sides. — MISS L.

DEAR POLLY — I have still another answer for the reader who wanted to know how to use a collection of match book covers. When our boys were cub scouts they were required to make a collection of some sort and both chose matchbooks. One glued his on a heavy metal wastebasket and then covered the basket with heavy clear plastic. The other boy acquired so many that he was able to cover a three-panel folding screen that he also covered with clear plastic. Both of these projects were very decorative and were used for years. Many who saw them became so interested they sent the boys more covers from foreign countries, private clubs and so on. A friend took on a more ambitious project and covered a large section of a recreation room ceiling with match book covers. — MARGERY.

Polly's problem

DEAR POLLY — I have a sweater made of one of the polyesters that came through many washings beautifully. It was machine washed and dried and always came out well in the past. But the last time it came out with what appears to be permanent wrinkles. I then washed it by hand but with no luck and then by machine again and it looked no better. Even a slightly warm iron will not remove the wrinkles. Is there an answer to this? — MRS. E.W.W.

DEAR MRS. E.W.W. — I do not know that there is a "sure cure" answer but I can tell you what I have done and with very good results. A pair of my part-polyester slacks went through the same sort of experience. The time they acquired the wrinkles someone else had washed them and I felt sure they were left in the dryer too long. I took a pressing cloth wrung out of white vinegar and water, placed it on top of the wrinkles and then ironed with a rather hot iron. Of course, one must be careful that the iron never touches the pants, only the damp cloth. They looked much better. The next time they were laundered in the machine with warm water, put in the dryer set on "Permanent Press" and removed the very minute the dryer stopped. They look fine. Perhaps such a treatment might help your sweater. — POLLY. (NEA)

Garden beauty

ABWA selects boss of the year

Larry S. Owen, partner and manager of T & 0 Rock Phosphate, has been named the 1977 Boss of the Year by the Sedalia Charter chapter of the American Business Women's Association (ABWA.) Owen received the award at the chapter's annual Boss Night meeting Tuesday evening at Maxines.

Mrs. Lorine Owen, a member of the office staff of the business nominated her employer for the award. Outstanding community service, business success and consideration for employes are factors weighed in the selection of the winner.

Sue Bell, a member of ABWA and a special language arts instructor at the Knob Noster Junior High, was honored at the meeting as ABWA Woman of the Year. The Woman of the Year from each chapter of ABWA competes for American Business Woman of the Year.

Page Williams, mayor of Arrow Rock, Mo., was the guest speaker at the meeting.

Her topic was "The Changing Role of Women."

Graduate

Mrs. James R. (Pat) Scott, daughter of Mrs. and Mrs. Bill Abel, LaMonte, recently received the degree of juris doctor from the University of Missouri-Kansas City School of Law. Mrs. Scott is presently employed with a Kansas City law firm. She, her husband and their two children live in LaMonte.

Scholarship winner

Miss Mary Joan Kennedy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas F. Kennedy, Tipton, is the winner of a $400 MFA scholarship. She graduated from Tipton High School May 20 and plans to attend the University of Missouri-Columbia to study biological science.

Bourbon Balls are Kentucky recipe

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

BOURBON BALLS

A Kentucky recipe that is repeated by request.

¼ cup 86 proof bourbon
2 tablespoons dark corn syrup
1 cup finely crushed vanilla wafers
1 cup finely chopped pecans
1 cup confectioners' sugar
2 tablespoons unsweetened cocoa, if desired

Stir together the bourbon and syrup; thoroughly stir in the remaining ingredients. Spoon ½ tablespoonfuls of the mixture onto wax paper generously covered with extra confectioners' sugar; roll each into a ball; roll in the sugar on the paper. Refrigerate in a tightly covered container at least overnight before serving; just before offering, shake a little confectioners' sugar over the balls. Stored in refrigerator or freezer, they keep a long time. Makes about 3 dozen.

Legislature approves school funding formula

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Four years of trying to revise the state's public school funding formula have ended with the Missouri legislature's final passage ot a bill designed to increase aid to poorer school districts.

But without a companion measure requiring counties to accurately assess property, opponents of the revised school financing bill complained that the measure was no more equitable than that used this year to distribute nearly $429 million to the state's 460 school districts.

"When you do not get reassessment, you get the real treatment," said Sen. A. Clifford Jones in urging the Senate Tuesday to turn back a compromise bill adopted by a joint legislative conference committee of the House and Senate.

The committee was designed to iron out differences between the two houses, but the final version appeared nearly identical to that passed by the Senate last Friday. It would increase aid over the present formula to 516 districts while 37 would lose.

The Senate narrowly adopted the compromise bill on an 18-15 vote, receiving just enough for final passagee. Senators representing St. Louis County and Kansas City, areas where school aid would decrease, voted against the measure, while those representing St. Louis City, which would receive $4.3 million more, were joined by outstate senators voting for it.

After accepting the compromise version, the Senate gave final approval to it 23-9, sending it to the desk of Gov. Joseph P. Teasdale, who has made the bill one of his priorities.

The conference committee's bill had been narrowly adopted 93-62 earlier Tuesday in the House, despite Rep. Steve Gardner's challenge to send it back to the compromise committee for further work.

"We ought to go all the way and do the job right or not do it at all," said the Ballwin Democrat. His area was one of the 15 of 23 St. Louis County districts which will lose money under the new formula.

But House Education Committee Chairman Wayne Goode, who had worked for the past four years to revise the formula, said the compromise bill was not a "political compromise."

"You're never going to have a formula that makes everybody happy," said Senate President Pro Tem Norman Merrell before his fellow lawmakers sent the measure to the governor. "I think this is the bill that does provide, as best can be provided, the most equitable distribution of tax money for school aid."

The differences in the finally approved version compared with the present formula included:

—An inclusion of the district's average adjusted gross income in computing one factor in the formula. Districts below the state average would get more aid and those with more than the state average would get less.

—The use of the number of Aid to Dependent Children students within a district. Districts with more pupils coming from welfare families would get additional state funds.

—Lowering from 80 per cent to 75 per cent the amount of state aid used for teacher salaries. The increased 5 per cent available to districts could be used for other expenses.

—An increase of $12 million for school bus transportation.

—A minimum of $283 per pupil with that base to be increased in the future as more money is appropriated by the state legislature to fund the formula.

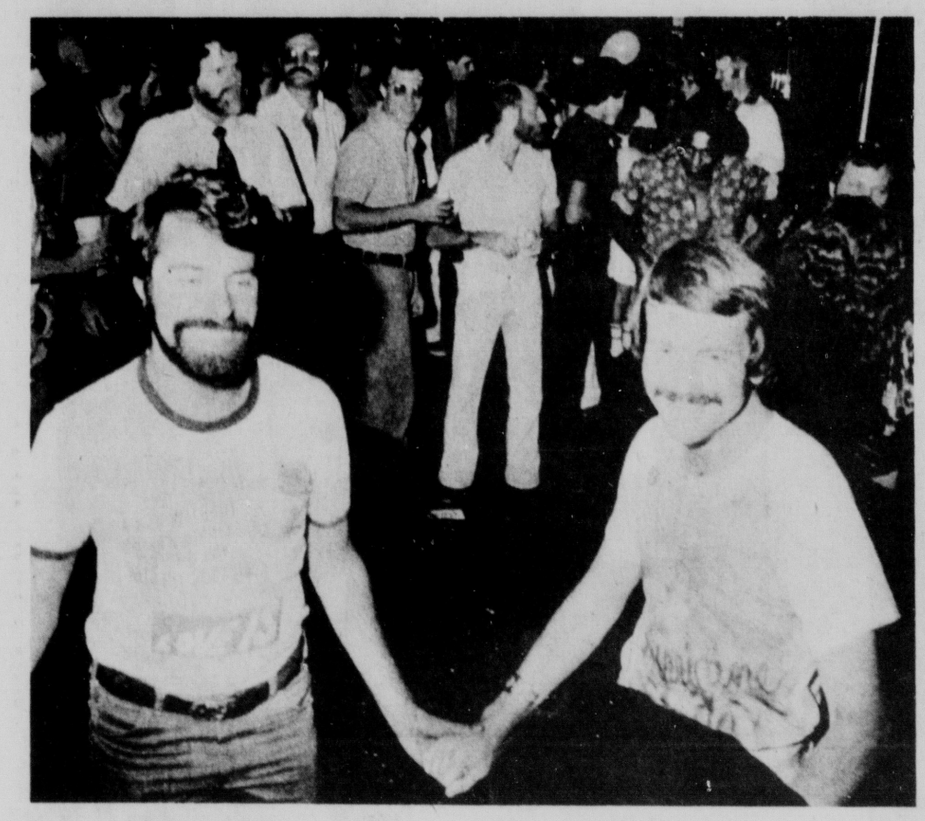

—Allowing districts to give some weight to total enrollment rather than average daily attendance. This factor is designed to help urban disgricts which are experiencing high absenteeism.

Jones called the bill a "public relations document" which asked the legislators to vote for it "just because it has the word, 'schools' in it."

The bill includes a disclaimer saying that the formula would only be followed to the extent of funds appropriated for schools by the state legislature. If the General Assembly were to fully fund the new program, it would cost an additional $200 million.

Jones had noted earlier that the lawmakers had written the disclaimer in such a way that it would not be included in the state statutes when the new bill is finally made law and printed.

Hiding the disclaimer, Jones said, would allow lawmakers to return to their home districts bragging of the passage of the new foundation formula but knowing all the while that it could not be fully funded.

After the vote

Anita Bryant gets a handclasp and hug from her husband, Bob Green, after voters repealed the Dade County, Fla., gay rights law by more than a 2-1 margin Tuesday. At bottom, Bob Kunst, left, a gay activist who ran the "Miami Victory Campaign," doesn't appear sad despite his efforts to prevent repeal of the law. He's holding hands with Lyn Frizzell, who wrote a pro-gay song. Ms. Bryant headed the "Save Our Children" campaign, the major force for repeal of the law.

Miami setback

Gay rights groups say they'll continue fight

By The Associated Press

What was supposed to be a victory celebration turned into a wake in Miami. A mournful candlelight march was held in San Francisco. In New York, the gay bars were somber.

Homosexuals and others favoring equal treatment were dismayed by Tuesday night's election results from Dade County, Fla., and derided those who had voted to repeal that county's homosexual rights law.

The final, unofficial tally was 202,319 to 89,562, with voter participation setting a record for special elections in Dade County. Political observers expressed surprise at the high turnout — 45 per cent of the county's registered voters — and the lopsided vote.

"They hate us for our virtues, not our vices," said Leonard Matlovich, who gained national attention in 1975 when he was discharged from the Air Force for acknowledging his homosexuality. "It's going to take a lot of love to turn this around because they don't know how to love."

Sarah Compton, who also was at the Fontainebleau Hotel in Miami Beach, said "Homosexuality isn't a sin. Discrimination against another person for sexual reasons is the real sin." She said she was heterosexual.

Instead of celebrating the hoped-for victory, the 300 people sang civil rights songs and listened to speeches urging them to keep fighting.

Meanwhile, singer Anita Bryant, who led the repeal effort, "danced a jig," said Mike Thompson, of Save Our Children. Miss Bryant, who promised a national crusade against homosexuality, had organized Save Our Children, Inc., which charged that the ordinance would allow homosexuals to recruit children and serve as role models.

In San Francisco, a candlelight vigil and march was held on gay-oriented Castro Street, and the marchers wore black arm bands.

But the city's large and politically active homosexual community — an estimated 100,000 in the population of 660,000 — prepared for the next battle.

"We're not going to give up," said David Goodstein, publisher of the nation's largest gay newspaper, The Advocate. "I sort of look at it like a war metaphor. We had an army of recruits. Now, we have an army of veterans."

San Francisco's homosexual community, ridiculed in an anti-gay commercial in Dade County, had poured cash and political talent into the anti-repeal effort. They held benefits, sold hundreds of T-shirts with anti-Bryant slogans and boycotted Florida orange juice products. Miss Bryant does television commercials for the Florida citrus industry.

Between 500 and 1,000 supporters of civil rights for homosexuals marched through New York's Greenwich Village early Wednesday, apparently demonstrating against the defeat of the ordinance. Police said the marchers were peaceful but loud.

State director analyzes defeat

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — The executive director of the Missouri Gay Caucus said Tuesday that he believes the defeat of a gay rights ordinance in Miami will serve as a rallying point for gays around the nation.

But Larry Eggleston said he sees some negative aspects coming out of the defeat as well. "This will slow down the already slow progress toward human rights for gay people and it may be a while before gays recover from it," Eggleston said. He also said the symbolic loss will make people back away from gay rights who would have otherwise supported them.

Eggleston said he was shocked by the margin of defeat.

Roll Call Report

Skelton suports delay

By Roll Call Report

WASHINGTON — Here's how area House members were recorded on major roll call votes May 26 through June 1:

HOUSE

CLEAN AIR ACT — Adopted, 255 for and 139 against, an amendment softening federal auto-emission standards. It was attached to the 1977 Clean Air Act Amendments (HR 6161), later passed and sent to the Senate.

The amendment was supported by the auto manufacturers and the United Auto Workers union and opposed by environmentalists. It gives auto makers a two-year delay (until the 1980 model year) before they must meet hydrocarbon emission standards, temporarily waives the proposed nitrogen oxide standard, and permanently softens the carbon monoxide standard. Those are the three major auto pollutants regulated by the 1970 Clean Air Act.

Rep. James Broyhill, R-N.C., a sponsor of the amendment, said its purpose "is to achieve strict air quality controls and, at the same time, balance this concern with other national goals." He added: "Our amendment will not only control automobile pollution, it will also save fuel, hold down consumer costs and preserve the strength of the American economy."

Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., an opponent, said: "The auto industry has spent an incredible amount of money in this lobbying campaign, and I think if they had spent that money in trying to meet these standards we would not be fighting this fight out today, and we would be talking about cleaner cities and healthier people across the country."

Reps. Ike Skelton and Richard Ichord voted yes.

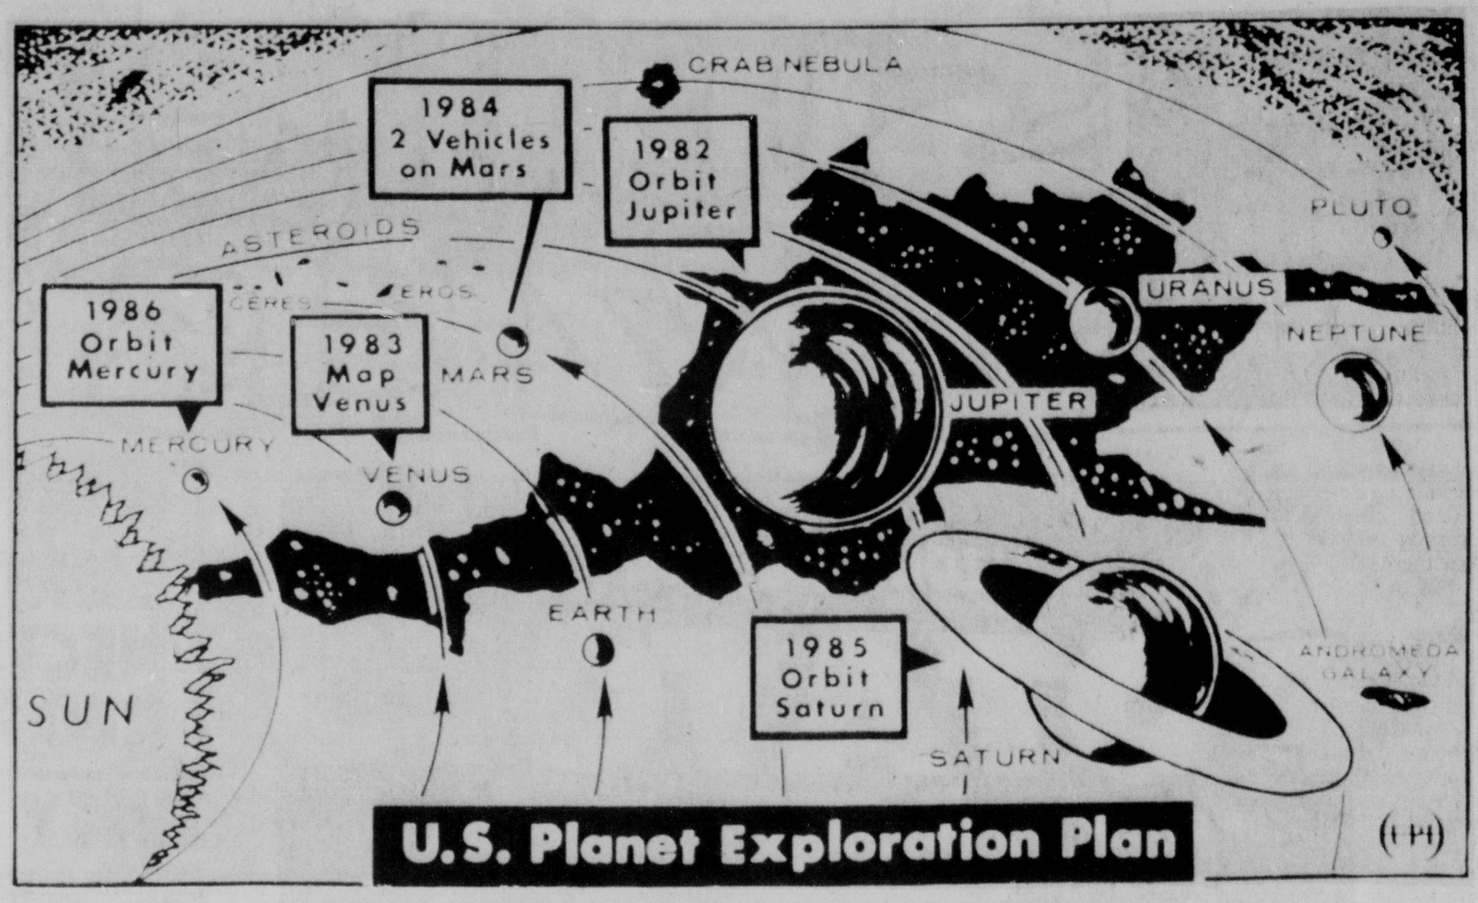

PORPOISES — Adopted, 244 for and 109 against, an amendment lowering the quota of porpoises that can be killed by commercial tuna fishermen in 1977. The overall bill (HR 6970) had recommended a quota of 78,000, but this amendment lowered the number to 69,000. HR 6970 was later passed. The Senate has not yet acted.

The bill's main thrust is to resolve the dispute between environmentalists and the merchant marine industry over the porpoise killing that is an incidental by-product of yellow-fin tuna fishing. The porpoises, a diminishing species, are unavoidably netted along with the tuna, and HR 6970 seeks to minimize the incidental killing while protecting the economic interests of the tuna industry.

Rep. Tim Lee Carter, R-Ky., a supporter of the amendment, said: "To me needless killing of the porpoises is almost like killing humans. I think we should avoid with all the strength we have the unnecessary killing of these mammals."

Rep. Bob Wilson, R-Calif., an opponent of the lower quota, said: "I don't think that the amendment will accomplish anything...except to fuzz up the bill, to make it unworkable, and to drive the tuna fishermen to some other area where they can fish, or else just drive them into bankruptcy."

Skelton voted no; Ichord did not vote.

Planetary exploration plan

NASA is developing a planetary exploration plan that proposes a 1984 launch of two roving Mars vehicles, a possible robot landing on Mercury and flights to Venus, Jupiter, Saturn, Haley's Comet and four asteroids, according to A. Thomas Young, head of planetary and lunar programs. Young, however, emphasized that only one program is currently approved by NASA and the White House. That's the Jupiter orbiter-probe mission. Other possibilities ranking high in the space agency's plans are a 1986 launch to orbit Mercury, a 1983 orbit of Venus to map its surface, a 1985 orbit of Saturn and a 1984 Mars expedition involving the landing of two vehicles. After being a 'somebody' for 63 hours

Anthony Kiritsis today only 'another mug'

By Tom Tiede

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (NEA) — Last February, for the first time in his life, Anthony Kiritsis was "somebody."

He wired a shotgun to the neck of an estanged business acquaintance and held him hostage for 63 hours. During the seizure he told waiting reporters: "I'm a goddamn national hero, and don't you forget it."

Today, Tony Kiritsis is nobody again. He remains something of a celebrity to the thugs with whom he shares space in the Marion County Jail here, also he still holds some fascination for casual conversation; but otherwise he has become merely another mug in prison dress, pale from lack of sunshine and afraid of tomorrow.

He sits at a gray visitor's table, talking with his hands. He is short, muscular, and wears a crew cut. He is alternately aggressive and disarmingly sensitive. "Who am I?" he snorts, then he begins to sob as he says in a whisper: "I'm a 44-year-old man and I've never been married, engaged, or even had a steady date."

It is not clear, in the shadow of the bars, whether the former national hero thinks a great deal or very little of himself. At one juncture he brags that his incoming mail has been "almost 100 per cent for me." Then, a moment later, contrite, weeping again, he remembers that when he was a child "the other kids hated me and I don't know why."

The son of a Greek immigrant, Kiritsis has from the beginning felt more the victim than the victimizer of society. He says family economic conditions forced him into an unnatural adolescence when, while others were out with girls or playing ball, "I was a 75-pound kid pushing a 150-pound ice cream cart for 12 hours of every day."

Even in high school, Kiritsis says he worked 70 hours a week at two jobs. Though it did him little good. "You never seen such a poor sonofabitch as I was." He remembers standing in an inspection line in school, where a teacher was looking at everyone's shoes: "Mine were all ragged and dirty, I'll never forget the humiliation."

For all of it, Kiritsis insists he wasn't scarred by his youth. He jumps quickly from the prison table, jabbing his finger, to say that he grew up fine. "I don't smoke, I don't drink much, and before this I never got into trouble. I'm an honest man. And by God you never knew a harder worker in your life, I flat guarantee it."

And yet Kiritsis did carry some of his youth into adulthood. He remembers his father being persecuted because he hired a black man in the ice cream store. He remembers his mother working all her life, then dying hard of cancer. "I don't understand these things," he says, "I look around and see misery everywhere and I don't understand."

Now he is sobbing again. His face is red and the backs of his wrists are wet from wiping. He tells of a cellmate who had spent 208 days in the jail and had not received one visitor, one letter or one phone call. When the man was finally released, broke, Kiritsis gave him $25 so that he "would have a chance, a goddamn little chance."

No doubt Tony Kiritsis identifies with the downtrodden. He feels he is one of them, underprivileged and abused. This is the rationale he uses to explain his crime. He regrets that crime, he says: "I was wrong to do it," but he quickly adds that he had been mistreated to the point where he couldn't control his anger.

Kiritsis is charged with kidnapping Indianapolis businessman, Richard Hall. He says Hall was involved in a conspiracy to cheat him regarding real estate holdings. He says the conspirators lied and manipulated "for such a long time that I couldn't take it any more." Kiritsis held the hostage in a building that was implanted with explosives.

To some degree, the kidnapper did become a national hero at the time. Many television viewers and newspaper readers were moved by Kiritsis' impassioned explanation of his actions. Following his arrest a short lived "Tony Kiritsis Defense Fund" was created. Besides this, 200 sympathic letters have come in from throughout the nation.

"I'm not a bad guy," Kiritsis says, reviewing reasons for his support. "I was in jail once for an Army brawl, and I also got a $5 fine for trespassing, but nothing else. I'm a good citizen, you understand?" He pulls a letter out of a file, from an attorney, to show "that some people think I'm a pretty decent man."

Indeed, as his keepers admit, Kiritsis is well thought of by inmates and administrators alike here. Also, visitors often stop to pat the prisoner on the back or shake his hand. Kiritsis has risen this far in the world: once his school chums called him names, now he says they go around town saying they knew him back when.

The prisoner enjoys what remains of his notoriety. But he admits it is small compensation. He lives in a 5 by 8-foot cell, his companions are shoplifters and addicts, and sometime this year he will go on trial on charges just short of murder.

Life. Year after year in a cage. "The worst night I ever spent was my first night in jail; if I'd have had the means I would have killed myself."

He was famous for 63 hours, a media star, a living-room staple, and he shook this city to its foundation. Now, weeping and far too late, he does not hesitate to say it wasn't worth it.

Tony Kiritsis (right)... wasn't worth it

USDA predicts '77 wheat crop to be good one

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite too much rain in some areas and not enough in others, farmers are headed for another bumper wheat crop.

The Agriculture Department says as of June 5 most of the winter wheat was headed out and combines were harvesting fields in much of the southern part of the country. But in the main breadbasket of the Great Plains, the harvest is lagging because of wet weather in some areas. About 13 per cent of the Texas wheat was combined as of June 5, and about 2 per cent in Oklahoma, both behind normal progress, the department said Tuesday in a weekly weather report.

Winter wheat makes up about three-fourths of the U.S. wheat supply. Spring-planted varieties in the northern states provide the remainder.

A month ago, USDA forecast that the 1977 winter wheat harvest will be about 1.48 billion bushels. Although that estimate was down 6 per cent from the 1976 harvest, it was 3 per cent more than USDA indicated last December in its initial crop forecast.

The Agriculture Department scheduled a new winter wheat estimate Wednesday based on surveys made on June 1.

Some private forecasters say the new estimate will be larger than last month's.

In its weather report, the department said last week's rain in many parts of the country helped corn and other crops. The West and parts of the South, however, continue to need moisture.

With nearly all of the corn planted, development is "far ahead of recent years" across much of the country, officials said.

"In the Corn Belt, the average plant height ranged from 8 to 16 inches," the report said.

"Most of the early corn was too tall to cultivate. Kentucky's early corn grew shoulder-high, and Wisconsin reached knee-high."

Normally, the average corn plant in the Midwest is five or six inches high by June 5, officials said.

With corn planting out of the way, soybean planting has made rapid progress. By June 5, 84 per cent of the acreage was planted, compared with 80 per cent a year ago, and the average progress on June 5 was 61 per cent.

Cotton forecast

WASHINGTON (AP) — World cotton production may rise about 10 per cent in 1977-78, the new International Votton Advisory Committee says.

The committee, which represents cotton producing and consuming countries, said Tuesday there could be "significantly higher planted acreage," of cotton.

"Moreover, a large part of the expansion in acreage is occurring in countries where yields usually run much higher than the world average, which holds out the potential for a larger gain in harvest than suggested by area figures alone," the committee said.

Thus, 1977-78 cotton output could be around 63.8 million bales worldwide, compared with 57.8 million last season.

The committee said that the largest increases are likely to occur in the United States, Mexico, Turkey, Greece and Colombia.

Soviet outlook

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union is headed for another bumper grain harvest this year, including a substantial increase in wheat production.

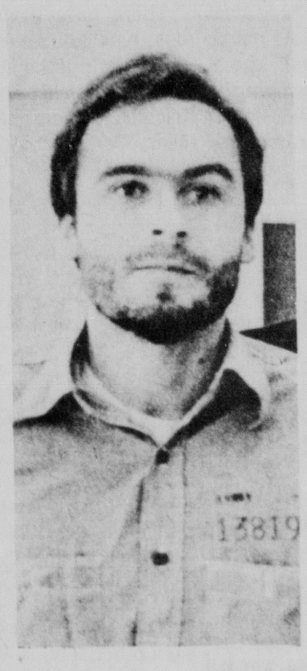

The Agriculture Department estimated Tuesday that 1977 Russian grain output will be 215 million metric tons, the third largest harvest on record. The 1976 grain harvest was a record 223.8 million tons and the second-ranking production was 222.5 million tons in 1973.

Officials said that Soviet crops have benefitted from "generally favorable weather and soil moisture conditions" although some parts of the spring crop area need rain.

If realized, the Soviet harvest could lead to a further buildup in grain reserves. The department's task force on Soviet grain said that further reports will shed more light on 1977 production.

Those reports will be issued approximately each month throughout the remainder of the grain season.

Lobbyists in Jefferson City say role often misunderstood

By SCOTT KRAFT
Associated Press Writer

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Once depicted as those who slipped wads of bills into the waiting palms of lawmakers, lobbyists today say "the old Boss Tweed cartoons no longer apply."

And while money is still perceived by many as a potent influencing tool here, lobbyists in the Missouri Capitol insist money plays a small role in their effectiveness.

John Britton, a lobbyist for some 20 years, says under-the-table payola, as in the days when Bill Tweed pulled strings in New York's Tammany Hall, is no longer used liberally to grease the workings of the legislature.

In those mid-1800s, Boss Tweed funneled funds to legislators to insure their agreement with his proposals. Britton disdains the label that era's cartoons gave the profession of influencing legislation.

"I really don't believe anybody represents us now as monsters or devious, sinister people," Britton says. A white-haired, distinguished man given to tailor-made suits, Britton usually stations himself outside the legislative chambers chain-smoking and chatting with state officials.

He and his two associates represent several firms, including Anheuser-Busch of St. Louis.

While Britton and others of the 450 registered lobbyists in the state say they don't often encounter public antipathy, the lobbying profession — scarred by its activity during earlier days — is often misunderstood, they believe.

"A lot of my best friends are lobbyists," says Jackie Gideon, lobbyist for the Missouri Nurse's Association. Ms. Gideon, as she prefers to be called, has lobbied in the General Assembly for three years, and spends relatively small amounts of money influencing legislation.

"Frankly, we do our job through the political clout 25,000 nurses can have when they write letters or call their legislators," she notes.

The importance of lobbyists to Missouri law-making is usually overestimated or underestimated, but hardly ever understood, lobbyists here say.

"The beliefs I project are not dreamed up by one guy down in a closet in the Anheuser-Busch brewery," Britton says. And money, he adds, "plays an infinitesimal less role than other roles of the lobbyist."

While the clandestine aura surrounding lobbying may have subsided, the fat entertainment expenses have not. Lobbyist reports on file with the state show entertainment is still a large part of the lobbying budget.

According to reports filed for the first four months of this legislative session, lobbyists spent the equivalent of $625 entertaining each of the 197 law makers, and more than $1,800 on entertainment for each day the legislature has been in session.

Because spending usually increases during the last month of the legislative session and some reports are filed late, it is expected that expenditures for the full 5½-month session will exceed the record $321,000 spent during the four-month 1976 session.

All registered lobbyists are required to file spending reports with the state.

By day, lobbyists patrol the Capitol hallways perching in lobbies outside the chambers exchanging good-natured barbs with legislators, reporters and aides. On the couch in a senator's office, they can be found patiently explaining and attempting to persuade.

By night, the lobbyist attains a higher profile — he becomes the spokesman before legislative committees, and is often subjected to intense questioning by panel members.

Despite their importance to law-making, lobbyists must still buck the reputation of being influence peddlers.

"We aren't here just to pass the time of day," Britton says. "If legislation comes along, we take a position on it if it affects us. The stuff we initiate doesn't spring out of a vacuum."

Lobbyists consider themselves tantamount to part of the official legislative process.

"We're all working in the process together," Ms. Gideon said. "It's certainly not an antagonistic relationship."

There are no score cards to judge the performance of lobbyists and their ultimate effectiveness. Handling the intangible side of the job rarely bothers most of them, however.

"You have to be imperturbable," Britton believes. "If things go badly, you can't kick and scream, and when things go well, you have to realize you haven't done it yourself. Usually, the reason it turns out well is because it was right — you'd play hell passing anything in here if it was wrong."

Of clients who keep such score cards on their lobbying efforts, Britton says: "If they're afraid of failure, then they better look elsewhere."

Columbia paper plans to sue for documents

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Columbia Tribune plans to sue State Auditor Thomas Keyes to force him to release documents collected during an audit of the state Board of Cosmetology in 1974.

Publisher Henry J. Waters III said Tuesday the suit will be filed in Cole County Circuit Court by the end of the week. The court will be asked to declare time sheets, employe expense records, raw files, work papers and other documents used in preparation of the audit public records and to order Keyes to release them.

Keyes refused a request by the newspaper to view the records contending a 1975 attorney general's opinion forbids release of the material.

Keyes, citing an opinion by then Atty. Gen. John Danforth, said he had no discretion to release the records.

The paper is seeking the records of that audit report released in 1974 which covered a period that cosmetology board nominee Theresa Forte of Kansas City worked as an inspector for the board.

Published reports have indicated that she was fired from that position in 1973. Gov. Joseph Teasdale recently appointed Mrs. Forte to the board.

Moberly voters approve sales tax

By The Associated Press

Voters in Moberly approved a one-cent city sales tax, while voters in Mexico rejected a similar proposal and Texas County's residents voted down a continuation of the county's public health unit.

The Moberly voters approved the sales tax on a vote of 1,583 to 578. In Mexico it was rejected 1,514 to 1,120.

In Texas County, the public health unit had been funded for two years with state and federal funds. Administrator Betty Love said the one mill levy was needed to continue operation. It was defeated 1,281-971.

Rape bill approved by Senate

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Missouri Senate gave final approval Tuesday to a bill which will make it more difficult to question a rape victim about her prior sexual conduct.

Under terms of the bill, which was passed on a 32-1 vote, a defense attorney who wants to question a rape victim about her prior sexual conduct, must first present his request to the judge during a private hearing with the judge and prosecutor.

It would be up to the defense to prove that the testimony was relevant to the pending case.

The measure is designed to make it easier for prosecutors to bring cases against those accused of rape. Proponents of the bill said the rape victim is at the mercy of the defense lawyer in a court trial, since the lawyer may question the victim about her prior sexual conduct in an attempt to discredit her testimony.

Sen. Mary Gant, D-Kansas City, who was handling the bill in the Senate, said testifying in a rape case has been a "humiliating experience" for victims, and that passage of the bill would make it easier for the victims to testify.

She noted that in rape cases, a victim's prior sexual conduct can now be brought to the attention of the jury, while that of the accused, as well as his prior record of rape convictions, cannot be brought out in trial as long as he does not take the stand.

"This bill would merely make it easier for victims to report and get a fair shake in the courts," Mrs. Gant said.

Because the Senate added a technical amendment to the bill, it must go back to the House for further consideration before being sent to Gov. Joseph Teasdale. The House had aproved the bill earlier.

Louisiana men killed in crash

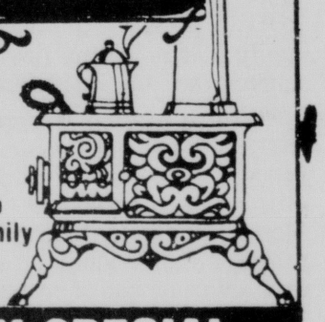

HOLLISTER, Mo. (AP) — Two Louisiana men were killed shortly after midnight when their tractor-trailer rig overturned and pinned them beneath the machine.

The victims were Donald Devore, 24, of Pineville, La., and Danny R. Flynn, 20, of Alexandria, La.

Officers said it appeared the driver went to sleep. The truck left the road on a curve, crossed back over the road, struck an embankment and overturned.

Use for station

The old fire station at 211 South Kentucky was saved from the wrecker's ball Monday night, at least for the time being.

With only one vote to spare, the City Council rejected a motion to raze the building, which is immediately south of the Municipal Building. The original plan, at the time the new city hall was authorized, was to eventually tear down the fire station and use the space for parking.

The fire station was built in 1887, and several people, councilmen as well as private citizens, expressed the feeling Monday night that it should be preserved. We would agree with this, with a couple of provisions.

One is that the building be structurally sound. We have heard varying reports on this, but the consensus Monday night seemed to be that it was unsafe. Obviously some sort of unbiased inspection should be done to determine the facts.

Which leads to the second qualification: That the building be put to some purpose; it makes little sense to preserve a structure that cannot be used in some manner. (One interesting suggestion we heard in this regard a while back was to turn the building into a home for the community theater; there was even a suggestion for a name: the Firehouse Players.)

Now that there has been a reprieve for the old fire station, the next step, it seems to us, would be to put together a committee, including members of the Pettis County Historical Society, to find the answers to (1) whether the building can be used for any purpose without the expenditure of large sums of money; and (2) what purpose would be feasible.

Why the citations?

We expect Sedalians are somewhat astonished by Mayor Allen Hawkins' action in presenting commendations to several firemen Monday night. They were recognized for their role in rescuing a woman from her burning house May 28.

We are all in favor of citing firemen for performance above and beyond the call of duty, when it is legitimately that. But this is not one of those occasions. Just the opposite appears to be the case, what with several neighbors in the area of the fire going out of their way to demand an unprecedented meeting with city and fire officials to protest the manner in which fireman behaved.

They pointed out that firemen were extremely slow to rescue the occupant of the house, and, after doing so at the insistence of neighbors, they did not administer any kind of first aid to the unconscious woman.

It seems to us that firemen need a crash course in proper procedures, rather than awards.

Foreign policy 'detente' with Hill

By MARTHA ANGLE and ROBERT WALTERS

WASHINGTON (NEA) — Despite his intensifying conflict with Congress over domestic spending programs, President Carter has achieved a fragile detente with Capitol Hill on foreign policy determinations.

The mutual hostility and suspicion which characterized foreign policy discussions between the executive and legislative branches during the eight-year reign of Henry Kissinger has all but disappeared.

That is not to suggest that congressional critics who challenged every move Kissinger made have suddenly lost interest in foreign policy issues now that a Democrat is occupying the White House. The agonizing lession of Vietnam is far too fresh for Congress to lapse into its old rubber stamp role.

Rather, Carter and his top foreign policy advisors — especially Secretary of State Cyrus Vance — have gradually convinced Congress that they are making a good faith effort to consult with key members of the House and Senate before crucial foreign policy decisions are made.

"Vance has practically worn a path between here and Foggy Bottom," said one staff aide for the House International Relations Committee. "If anything, there's almost been over-consultation," a Senate Foreign Relations Committee source said.

Especially significant was the meeting Vance held late last month with key members of both the Armed Services and Foreign Relations committees of the Senate, plus Democratic and Republican leaders of the full Senate, to discuss progress to date in the SALT talks.

The session, which cut across the usual jurisdictional lines of the Senate committee system, was chaired by Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., the most knowledgeable and adamant congressional critic of the first strategic arms limitation treaty.

Jackson, whose support will be critical if Carter is to obtain any viable public consensus behind a new SALT agreement, had been miffed to learn from the newspapers that Vance and the Soviet negotiators had achieved a framework for further bargaining in their recent Geneva talks after Carter had personally assured congressional leaders the secretary of state would be making no new American proposals.

With other "hawks" from the Armed Services Committee, Jackson let Vance know, in no uncertain terms, that senators who will have to ratify any new SALT treaty which might be negotiated expect to be kept abreast of all new developments in the future. Vance promised to comply with the request.

The State Department has been careful to keep the appropriate members of the House and Senate fully apprised of evolving administration policies in most other areas, especially where Cuba and the Panama Canal are concerned. And on Africa, our sources report, the administration has relied heavily on congressional input in developing its new policies.

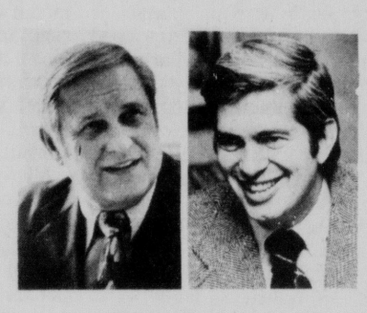

There have been some notable foulups, particularly on the politically sensitive issue of the Middle East. For more than two weeks, Israel and its powerful friends in the Senate were in a dither over Carter's attempts to put new restraints on U.S. arms transfers — a policy that initially provided no special exception for Israel.

"That was our worst mistake," one State Department official conceded. "But it was basically a problem of communication, not intent, and we got it unscrambled eventually."

There is still some resistance within the State Department to the Carter administration's calculated political decision to involve Congress more deeply than ever before in the formulation of American foreign policy.

"Our toughest job is right here in the department," said one congressional liaison officer for State. "There are still a lot of bureaucrats who don't trust the Hill and who think that only our African experts, for example, really understand the problems of Zaire.

"Well, the fellows in Congress may not follow every intricacy of Shaba province the way the African Bureau does, but they sure as hell know what will float with the American public. And both Vance and Carter understand the importance of that kind of expertise."

Merry-go-round

Intrigue surrounds slaying of playboy

By JACK ANDERSON and LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON — At two in the morning of May 12, the body of restaurateur Alexis Goodarzi, the self-styled "prince" of Capitol Hill, was found slumped behind the wheel of his orange Porsche sports car. There were three .32 calibre slugs in his head, the work of a professional killer.

Investigators now suspect that the flamboyant Goodarzi was an undercover operative for Iran's dread secret police. One investigator close to the case called him the "Tongsun Park of Iran," a reference to the man-about-Washington who allegedly tried to buy influence on Capitol Hill for the South Korean government.

Like Park, Goodarzi was a social swinger who packed a big bankroll and entertained congressmen. Both men were in their 30s; both moved at a fast pace; both reportedly had tens of thousands of dollars scattered in Washington bank accounts. Park reportedly had ties to South Korea's KCIA, Goodarzi to Iran's Savak.

But Goodarzi surpassed Park in dash and daring. On the night Goodarzi died, two beautiful women were waiting for him — one in a late-night joint, the other in his condominium. He also provided exotic beauties, our sources say, for congressmen with a taste for illicit romance.

Because one of the women was whispered to be a Korean, House investigators have been asking questions about Goodarzi. Their only interest, as we reported last week, was to determine whether he had any direct connection with the Korean scandal. The House Standards Committee is not investigating his alleged Savak activities nor his Capitol Hill call girl operations.

Ostensibly, Goodarzi was the maitre d' at the soigne' Rotunda restaurant on Capitol Hill, a place where congressmen can dine discreetly with their lady friends. But the police believe he was keeping a quiet watch on his prominent clientele and reporting spicy tidbits to Savak contacts in the Iranian embassy, possibly for blackmail purposes. Our sources say he was in touch with two embassy contacts.

We have also made another significant discovery. Months ago, Iranian sources furnished us with a list of 14 top Savak agents in the United States. They are headed by Col. Mansur Rafizadeh, an Iranian diplomat in New York, whom U.S. intelligence sources confirmed is a Savak bigwig.

The fifth person on the list, an attache at the Iranian embassy, helped arrange to return Goodarzi's body to Iran. He has also made persistent efforts to gain possession of Goodarzi's effects, which include tapes, correspondence, lists of names and other contents from safety deposit boxes.

We have agreed to withhold the name of this embassy official, because we have been unable to corroborate from U.S. sources that he is a Savak agent. He acknowledged that he had met with Goodarzi at the Rotunda but denied the meeting had anything to do with intelligence activities. He was convinced, said the official, that Goodarzi had no contact with Savak agents.

"Our two countries are too close to each other," he said, "for us to want to (traffic in Captiol Hill gossip)."

Footnote: The murdered maitre d' operated on the edge of the underworld. He gambled heavily and had narcotics connections. Police believe he was killed, for reasons unknown, by an underworld executioner.

Put shelter in school

The following is in the form of an open letter to the superintendent of schools and the Board of Education.—Ed.

I am a senior citizen and have great-grandchildren in the Sedalia schools.

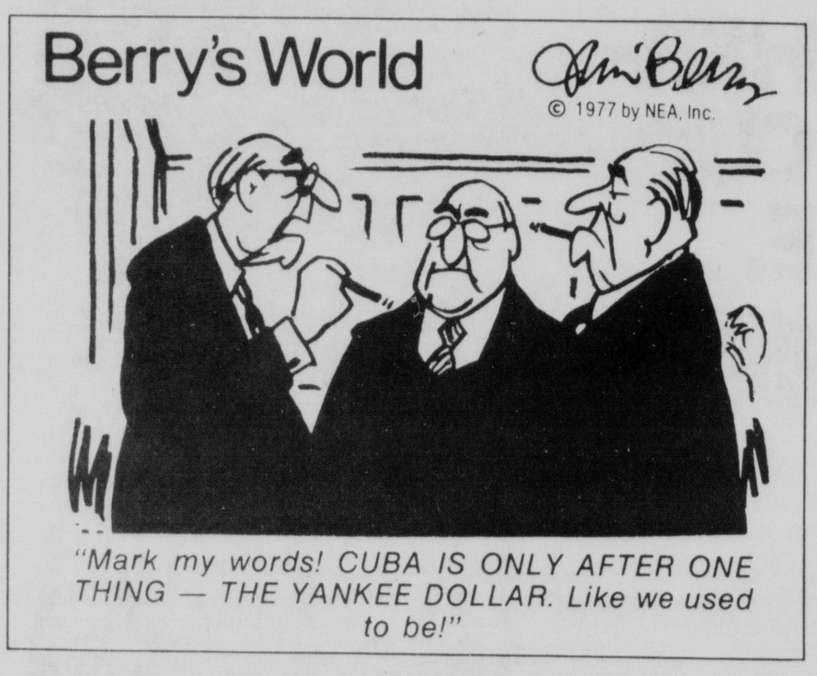

I am not against a middle school for I feel the school board knows what it can do. But, I do hope and pray that if you do have a wing built on the Junior High School, you will build some kind of a safe storm shelter.

Our old schools as well as most of our old houses have some kind of a basement for refuge.

After the May 4 storm, it should teach us that all these fine buildings above ground may be strong, but they can't stand through a severe tornado.

Our storm warnings say don't take refuge in brick buildings with wide expanding roofs. Our new college and our junior high buildings are just that. I can't feel that the children are safe in the halls. So I ask you as many others do, when you build take thought of the safety of the children not the looks of the building. (Dig a basement.)

Who was behind those FBI burglaries?

Rowan

WASHINGTON — With the Richard Nixon-David Frost extravaganza behind us, and H. R. (Bob) Haldeman and John N. Mitchell about to go to prison, you would think we Americans could relegate Watergate to history.

But not quite.

Still with us, like the last sores of a bad infection, are a few FBI violations of law that took place in the Watergate era. Attorney General Griffin Bell vows that he won't go back to Georgia until he unravels the mysteries of how the FBI wound up with a "Squad 47," which allegedly committed burglaries and other crimes in New York several years after the FBI director supposedly had forbidden surreptitious entries.

Current newspaper headlines and stories suggest that Bell is groping with the indictment of an FBI supervisor named John J. Kearney for illegal wiretapping, mail-opening and conspiracy in the early 1970s. The question, to some, is whether Kearney, if found guilty, is to be condemned and punished under the Nuremberg principle that an order from a superior is no excuse to commit a crime.

That is not what bothers Bell, who knows as most of us do that an order to a law enforcement officer to break into someone's office or open his mail is far different from an order to murder and massacre people.

Bell is pursuing the Kearney case, against the anguished cries of some FBI agents and even a few civil libertarians, because he views it as a serious example of federal abuse of power. He wants to know:

— Were the illegal New York operations against the Weathermen, which embraced some 70 agents, a wildcat deal run by an FBI maverick? Or,

— Did the White House secretly order such violations while establishing on-paper evidence that Nixon opposed such actions? And,

— Given J. Edgar Hoover's late-years opposition to surreptitious entries and other extra-legal maneuvers, did the White House order an "end run" around the director, authorizing one of his subordinates to approve the New York activities? Or,

— Did Hoover forbid burglaries "for the record" and then institute a secret code with which to approve them?

To understand Bell's quandary, you have to remember that the Watergate hearings disclosed "the Huston plan," a proposal by Nixon aide Tom Charles Huston that dissent in America be quieted by a systematic program of FBI and other burglaries, CIA openings of the mail of U.S. citizens, electronic surveillance and more.

Huston's memo warned that certain of the recommendations were "clearly illegal" and that, even though Hoover had authorized burglaries in the past, he opposed the Huston plan.

Nixon has claimed that he approved and then rescinded the Huston plan in 1970, but Bell and his aides note that the CIA went on opening the mail of Americans until 1973; the White House plumbers committed burglaries; the Howard Hunt-G. Gordon Liddy group stole into the Watergate headquarters of the Democratic party; and an FBI burglary squad set out to do in the Weathermen, a group specifically named as a target of the Huston plan.

Though "rescinded," the Huston plan stayed very much alive.

In the last two weeks I've talked to FBI officials at the very top and through the ranks. They don't believe Kearney and other agents went out on wildcat vigilante operations. FBI discipline was too strict for that. So who authorized their ventures?

I have previously opposed prosecuting agents like Kearney just for the sake of vengeance — especially since this society, in those days, glorified any FBI or CIA agent who did in "the enemy," no matter how many illegal or dastardly tactics he used. I have said that the only issue now before us is how do we organize our society, structure our laws, so as to ensure that similar abuses will not be part of our future.

Griffin Bell says his goal is for failsafe guidelines and laws. Until he satisfies his quest for knowledge about how our law enforcers suddenly became lawbreakers, we're going to have to put up with a few more months of "Watergate."

Retirement problems

Growing numbers of U.S. workers are being forced to retire before the age of 65, a Conference Board study finds. This trend is beginning to cause economic and social problems. The main worry for retirees is money. About 56 per cent of all the nation's employes (except those who work for government) are not covered by company retirement plans.

McRae on inconsistency

Royals one game below .500 mark

KANSAS CITY (AP) — He is by nature a man of deeds, not words, and he is naturally getting tired of everybody asking him to make excuses.

At the beginning of this baseball season Hal McRae, like everyone connected with the Kansas City Royals, expected the club to be improved over the team that won the American League's Western Division championship last year.

But after a 4-0 start, the Royals began floundering. A two-run rally in the ninth inning, capped by Joe Zdeb's bases-loaded single, lifted them to a 5-4 victory over the Boston Red Sox Tuesday night. But they're still one game below .500 and still six games in back of the front-running Minnesota Twins.

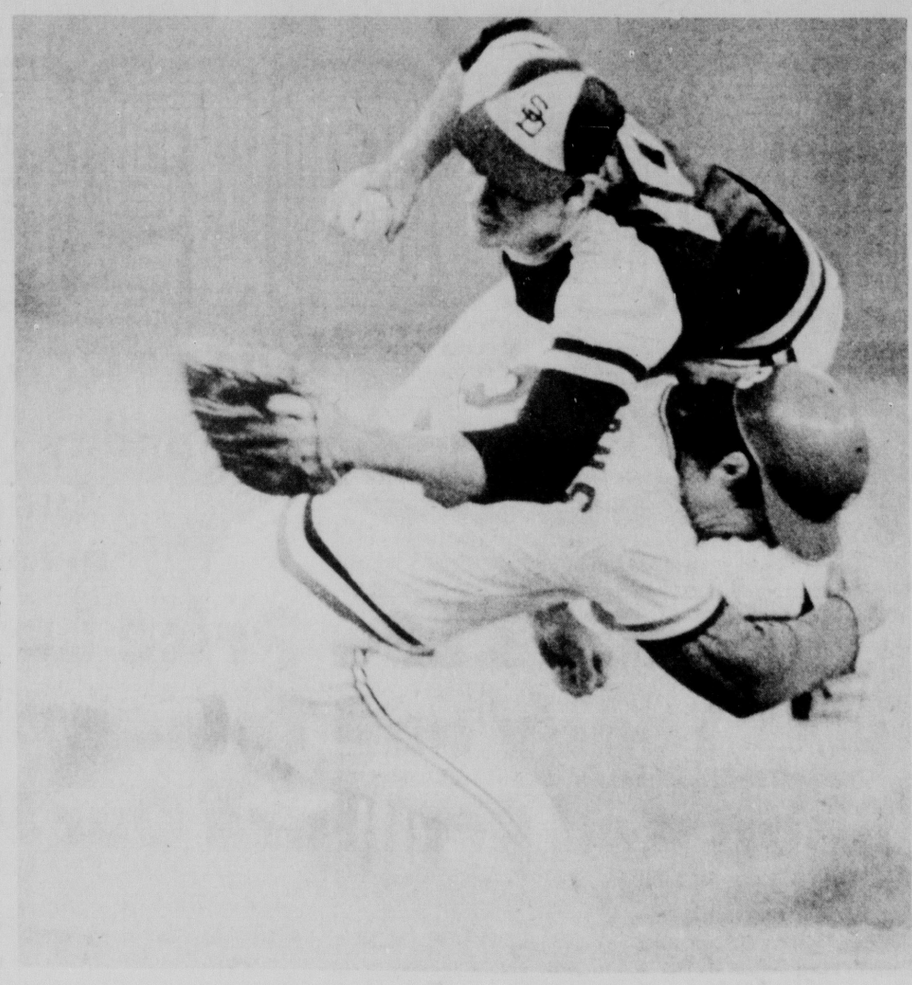

"We've been consistently inconsistent," said the outfielder-designated hitter, an unchallenged team leader.

"From about the second week of the season people have been asking me why aren't we playing well. I wish I knew the answer. But I don't. It's the little things, mostly, that are keeping us from jelling. On nights we get good pitching, we don't get any hits. On nights we hit, our pitching falls to piece. We've been making mistakes in base running, mistakes fielding, mistakes here, mistakes there."

The season is still young, with plenty of time for the Royals to clean up their act and return the championship to the baseball-happy fans of Kansas City.

Mark Littell, in relief of starter Jim Colborn, notched the victory Tuesday night while hard-luck rookie Mike Paxton took the loss.

Al Cowens' leadoff single began the winning rally, then Amos Otis walked and Darrell Porter sacrificed the runners up.

No double play

St. Louis catcher Ted Simmons knocks over the Padres' Mike Champion to break up a duble play in the first inning of Tuesday's game. The Cards' Ken Reitz hit a grounder to infielder Bobby Valentine to start the action. The Padres won 9-5. (UPI)

Walton not tops in all-star vote

NEW YORK (AP) — Bill Walton helped the Portland Trail Blazers to the National Basketball Association title, but the 6-foot-11 center finished second to Kareem Abdul-Jabbar of the Los Angeles Lakers in the NBA all-star voting.

Walton was joined on the second team by Julius Erving and George McGinnis of the Philadelphia 76ers, whom the Blazers defeated in the championship playoffs.

Abdul-Jabbar and Pete Maravich of the New Orleans Jazz led those named to the first team, which was announced Tuesday by the NBA.

Abdul-Jabbar collected 107 points in voting by sports writers and broadcasters from all league cities. The first-team selection was the sixth of the center's eight-year NBA career.

Maravich, like Abdul-Jabbar a first-team repeater, received 104 points to earn one of the guard positions on the team. Maravich averaged 31.1 points per game to lead NBA scorers and earn his second All-Star award.

Forwards Elvin Hayes of the Washington Bullets and David Thompson of the Denver Nuggets and guard Paul Westphal of the Phoenix Suns complete the first team.

Filling out the second team are guards George Gervin of the San Antonio Spurs and Jo-Jo White of the Boston Celtics.

In other developments, the NBA announced that playoff attendance had risen by almost 5 per cent over last year. Attendance at the 53 post-season games totalled 806,994 for an average of 15,226 per game, compared with an average 14,504 for 50 playoff games last year.

Regular season attendance totaled 9,898,521.

Rader sold

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Veteran third baseman Doug Rader was sold by the San Diego Padres to the Toronto Blue Jays Tuesday night.

Rader, a major leaguer for 10 years, had not been expected to hit it off with San Diego's new manager, Alvin Dark. Rader was acquired by the Padres from Houston in a trade in December, 1975.

The Padres said Pat Scanlon, 24, an infielder acquired May 18 from the St. Louis Cardinals, was being recalled from Hawaii of the Pacific Coast League to replace Rader. Scanlon was hitting .405 in 11 games with Hawaii.

Rader, 32, was batting .269 in 52 games this year.

Shades of the '50s

Big league offspring fill draft list

NEW YORK (AP) — Bob Kennedy ... Jim Landis ... Tito Francona.

The names carry with them memories of the 1950s when all three were major league mainstays. If you remember them as players, the years are creeping up because all three had sons chosen Tuesday in baseball's amateur draft.

Kennedy is now vice president for baseball operations of the Chicago Cubs and had the final say on his club's selection in the draft. The St. Louis Cardinals saved him from facing the decision whether to draft his son, Terry, by picking the young Florida State University catcher on the draft's first round.

Kennedy, the sixth player chosen, batted .333 with eight home runs and 41 runs batted in this season. For his career, the slugging catcher has a Florida State record 32 homers and a .348 batting average.

Despite those impressive numbers, Kennedy doesn't think he's ready for the majors quite yet. "I feel through natural development and playing, I'm a couple of years away," he said.

Kennedy's coach at FSU is ex-major league infielder Woody Woodward. "I could coach another 10 years and not have another prospect like Terry," said Woodward. "He's that good. There're a lot of clubs in the big leagues he could play for right now."

Landis, once the fleet center fielder of the Chicago White Sox, had his son, Craig, chosen 10th in the first round by the San Francisco Giants. The youngster is a shortstop at Vintage High School in Napa, Calif.

Then, on the draft's second round, it was Francona's turn. The Cubs went for his son, Terry, a first baseman from New Brighton, Pa.

The No. 1 choice in the draft belonged to the Chicago White Sox, who selected and then quickly signed first baseman-outfielder Hal Baines from St. Michaels, Md.

Baines, an 18-year-old slugger, grew up just 10 miles from Sox owner Bill Veeck's former home in Easton, Md. Veeck, who knows the territory and watched the youngster play Little League ball, traveled back to the Maryland Eastern Shore community to sign him.

Pitchers dominated the first round with 11 picked. Nine were right-handers. The top mound prospect is right-hander William Gullickson, a 6-foot-3, 200-pounder from Joliet Catholic High School, drafted second by Montreal.

The draft continued today with Minnesota holding the first choice in the secondary phase which deals with players previously drafted but not signed.

Cardinals bow 9-5 to Padres

ST. LOUIS (AP) — It may be only a play that every club uses, but don't be mundane with Don Kessinger.

Kessinger was picked off second base by an embarrassingly wide margin in a pinch-runing role Tuesday night and the St. Louis Cardinals wound up losing 9-5 to the San Diego Padres.

"That was the ball game for us," chirped Roger Craig, the Padres' pitching coach, following a seventh-inning pickoff play executed by Rollie Fingers from the mound.

"We have a manager now that likes to work on different things," said Craig in referance to new field pilot Al Dark's penchant for detail. "We're going to start using a lot more of them."

San Diego's maneuver, set up during a conference at the mound when Dark summoned Fingers to relieve Dave Tomlin, came with none out and Cardinals at first and second following hits by Keith Hernandez, Ken Reitz and Jerry Mumphrey that produced a run.

But long before the scenario, said Fingers, members of the Padres had assembled voluntarily on the artificial turf at Busch Stadium in order to rehearse.

"We worked on it for about an hour and a half," said Fingers, who during the live exercise used shortstop Bill Almon to decoy Kessinger while second baseman Mike Champion covered.

"Donnie (Kessinger) has been a pretty good baserunner," noted Fingers. "I looked over at the shortstop moving to draw Kessinger away and turned and threw. I was surprised to see him leaning the wrong way."

Fingers' throw preserved a 7-5 San Diego edge constructed on Dave Winfield's towering two-run homer during a three-run opening inning and four more runs in the fifth, including one on a Winfield single.

St. Louis then surrendered two more runs on Kessinger's throwing error from third base in the ninth and coaxed only a walk to go with three strikeouts during Fingers' three hitless innings.

"He's done a super job," said Craig of the 30-year-old Fingers, who recorded his 14th save in his 33rd Padres mound appearance. "I've seen a lot of great relief pitchers over the years and he's the best I've ever seen."

Bob Owchinko, 1-0, a rookie left-hander and former Eastern Michigan standout selected first by San Diego in last summer's free agent draft, posted his first major league triumph on a yield of eight hits through the middle 4 2-3 innings, with Cards starter Larry Dierker, 1-2, taking the loss.

"He'll be a great pitcher," predicted Craig of the 22-year-old Owchinko. "He needed to get that first win under his belt. He's just a baby. This time last year he was still in college."

Cus D'Amato, who managed Floyd Patterson to the heavyweight championship, is now training two young heavies, Cyclone Hart and Bob Stewart.

Pitchers main target for Royals in draft

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Although the Kansas City Royals say they weren't emphasizing pitching, they drafted nine hurlers in their first 13 selections of the free agent draft.

"With our low draft choice our philosophy was to select the best player available," said John Schuerholz, director of scouting and player development.

Royals pitching has been disappointing this season.

The Royals, choosing 23rd among the 26 major league teams Tuesday, used their first pick to grab Michael Jones, a 17-year-old left handed pitcher from Pittsford, N.Y. The 6-6, 215 lb. senior at Sutherland High School was 8-3 and had an earned run average of 1.04 this year.

He struck out 183 men in 87 innings while pitching three nohitters.

"We're extremely pleased to be able to select Jones as our first-round choice," said Schuerholz. "He's a strong, hard-throwing lefthander who our people feel is one of the best prospects in the country."

The second phase of the draft begins today.

The next three players the Royals drafted were all pitchers: Michael Morley of Saginaw, Mich., Russell Davis of Meridian, Miss., and William Miller of Portland, Ore.,

The Royals used their No. 5 pick to grab outfielder Phil Westendorf of Washington State University before choosing pitcher Donald Oliver of Victoria, Tex.

No. 7 was Kelly Heath of Greenville, N.C., followed by pitcher Gerald Ako of Hawaii University and shortstop Robert Bonner of Texas A&M.

Seattle Slew near immortality

NEW YORK (AP) — Seattle Slew "will be a better horse when Billy can train him up to one race rather than try to finesse him through three," says Mickey Taylor.

"That's where Billy deserves all the credit," Taylor said of trainer Billy Turner's "kidglove" handling which has paid off in eight victories and brought the colt to the threshold of becoming the first unbeaten Triple Crown champion.

That threshold can be crossed Saturday in the 1½-mile Belmont Stakes, and if it is, the colt's value will increase even more. It already is much greater than the $3.5 million for which he is insured.

"Sometime we're going to have to sit down and decide what we're going to do," said Taylor, who owns Seattle Slew along with his wife, Karen, and Dr. Jim Hill and his wife, Sally. The Slew races in Karen Taylor's name.

One option is to race the colt as a 4-year-old — something that is hardly ever done any more with top 3-year-olds in this age of multi-million-dollar syndication.

The Taylors have talked of racing Seattle Slew next year. "We would like to," said Karen, "but we want to do what's best for Slew. We don't want to get him beat. I don't mean by racing him but by racing him when we shouldn't."

There have been "gold mine" offers for sale or syndication — one reportedly for $10 million before the Kentucky Derby even was run — and Mickey said people have mentioned figures like $12 million.

Of the increasing millions being mentioned, he said, "It's like snow in the winter time. After it gets over three feet deep it doesn't matter."

As for Seattle Slew's possible race-by-race campaign for the rest of this year, there are several prestigious handicaps in the fall and, of course, a much-anticipated meeting with Forego, the three-time Horse of the Year.

But for now, the only thing that matters to the Slew camp is the $150,000-added Belmont, the finale of the Triple Crown which includes the Derby and Preakness. Only nine 3-year-olds have accomplished the triple, the last being Secretariat in 1973.

Seattle Slew prepped for the Belmont Tuesday, breezing three-quarters in 1:113-5 and up seven-eighths in 1:252-5. His time for the first quarter under jockey Jean Cruguet was 243-5 and 474-5 for the half.

Sanhedrin, John Galbreth's Belmont candidate who was third in the Derby, also worked Tuesday, going three-quarters in 1:141-5, with fractions of 251-5 and 491-4. "He's fit ... the work was just fine," said trainer Lou Rondinello.

Others expected to be entered Thursday are Hey Hey J.P., Run Dusty Run, Iron Constitution, Spirit Level and Mr. Red Wing. While Hey Hey J.P., seventh in the Preakness, will be entered, trainer John Campo indicated he more than likely will run instead in the $25,000-added Keystone Handicap in Philadelphia.

Twins outsmart Chisox

By TOM CANAVAN
AP Sports Writer

Bob Lemon says that his Chicago White Sox can compete with the Minnesota Twins this year.

But if they do, they will have to outthink them first.

The Twins outsmarted the White Sox with a crucial double steal in the 11th inning that gave them a 6-5 victory Tuesday night. The victory increased the Twins first-place lead in the American League West Division to two games over the White Sox.

With the score 5-5 and Jerry Terrell and Rod Carew on base, Twins Manager Gene Mauch ordered a double steal.

Terrell, on the front end of the double steal, was not the least bit surprised whe the sign was flashed.

"Gene (Mauch) asked me, 'Can you steal?' and I said yes, they weren't even looking for it. The pitcher was just concentrating on the hitter."

The steal put runners at second and third and it looked like they would stay there after Larry Anderson struck out Lyman Bostock for the second out.

That put Willie Norwood and his .080 batting average at the plate for the Twins. Norwood grounded to shortstop Alan Bannister for what appeared to be the final out of the inning.

"I wanted to get a second chance," Norwood said after the game.

Bannister gave it him, throwing the ball low and in the dirt past first baseman Jim Spencer, allowing Terrell to score the winning run.

In other American League action, Texas defeated New York 7-3, Kansas City edged Boston 5-4, Milwaukee nipped Baltimore 7-6, Detroit whipped Seattle 5-2 and Toronto bested California 6-3.

Rangers 7, Yankees 3

Willie Horton's fluke double triggered a five-run fourth inning and carried the Rangers to their victory over the Yankees.

With two on and two out in the fourth, Horton hit a high fly ball that centerfielder Mickey Rivers lost in the lights, allowing two runs to score. Toby Harrah followed with his seventh homer of the year and the Rangers got another run on two doubles off loser Ed Figueroa.

Blue Jays 6, Angels 3

Ron Fairly's eighth-inning home run off Paul Hartzell broke a 3-3 tie and powered the Blue Jays to their third straight victory.

Streaker barely escapes being trampled on track

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — A jockey's agent leaped onto the Ak-Sar-Ben race track Tuesday and dragged to safety a streaker who had disrobed virtually under the noses of 12 on-rushing race horses.

The horses, galloping toward the finishing line at an estimated 35 miles an hour, trampled the pants of Dennis E. Montgomery, 32, of Omaha.

"I was thinking about those boys," said J. D. Wiant, an Arkansas horseman who is agent for jockey Bruce Brown. Brown was aboard the winning horse, El Chepo.

Wiant said his concern was to avoid a massive pileup of horseflesh, jockeys and streaker.

Montgomery ran up the track, disrobing, before 12,206 persons in the grandstand as the horses made the last turn of the mile and 1-16th 4th race. Arms outstretched, he stood about 110 yards from the finish line, facing the horses as they bore down on him.

Wiant, who was watching the race from along the fence, said he first saw Montgomery "when he was taking his pants off.

"I knew we had to get him off there. I cleared the fence with one jump," Wiant said.

The streaker fell to the ground, clutching at the dirt, as Wiant reached him, and the agent dragged him out of danger, digging a furrow in the track.

Brown said two possibilities existed as El Chepo approached Montgomery.

"If the guy was standing up, he'd (El Chepo) have run over him. If he was laying down, the horse would have jumped him."

Montgomery was handcuffed by track security and Omaha police arrested him on charges of indecent exposure and disorderly conduct.

According to the Omaha World-Herald, Montgomery walked away from the Veterans Administration Hospital in Knoxville, Iowa, April 12, but hospital records showed no current order for his return.

Cards' Denny fined $250

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Pending possible appeal, the St. Louis Cardinals' John Denny has been fined $250 for his part in a run-in with National League umpire Jim Quick.

The 24-year-old Denny, who has a 7-0 pitching record, was notified of the penalty by league headquarters Tuesday in the aftermath of an incident Monday night.

Quick, the plate umpire in a Cardinals game against the San Diego Padres, accused Denny of "cussing me from the mound" while disputing a pitch on which the Padres' Gene Richards walked in the seventh inning.

"I didn't cuss him," claimed Denny, who was ejected. "The only thing I said was, 'Get your bleep in gear.' In that situation I had to do everything I could to let him know I wasn't happy."

St. Louis Manager Vern Rapp said the club has sent its account of the incident to NL President Chub Feeney, noting the report "is not an official protest."

"He has a right (to appeal), naturally," Rapp said of Denny. "I'm sure all players do."

When John Havlicek of the Boston Celtics scored his 1,000th point of the 1976-77 season, it marked the 15th year in a row he had gone that high.

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Cincinnati Bengals of the National Football League have signed their fifth-round draft choice, Ray Phillips of Nebraska.

The 6-foot-4, 215-pound Phillips made 75 tackles in 1976. "Phillips impresses us," said General Manager Paul Brown.

By Oswald & James Jacoby

Today's hand from the Lukacs-Rubens book looks like some sort of a joke hand which it really is. Unless either clubs or diamonds break 4-0 against you there are 13 easy tricks.

There is a perfect safety play in clubs. You win the first trick with dummy's ace of spades and play dummy's king of clubs to retain a finesse against either opponent. East shows out so you will normally plan to play East for all four diamonds in case that suit won't break. So you come to your hand with the king of spades, lead a club to dummy's 10, cash dummy's ace of hearts, come to your hand with the king and pause for further study when West drops a spade.

East has started with eight hearts and at least two spades. He can't hold four diamonds so you play your ace of diamonds and East shows out. Now you lead the 10 of diamonds, cover West's jack with the king or queen, run off your clubs, take a finesse against the nine of diamonds and make your whimsical grand slam.

Ask the Jacobys

An Iowa reader wants to know the difference between short club and artificial club.

The short club (always at least three in expert circles) is a convenience bid. Partner may pass.

The artificial club is a forcing opening bid and has nothing at all to do with clubs.

Ann Landers

Help with care of elderly parent

Dear Ann Landers: You printed a letter from a desperate woman who was trapped into caring for an elderly parent. Ten years before, she promised her father she would always take care of "Mother." Now she is being driven crazy by constant nagging, financial trouble (gets $246 a month Social Security), no friends — and she hates everybody.

Your response was, "There's got to be an answer to your problem but I don't know it." You asked for help from readers. Well, here I am.

First: Your mother is eligible for supplemental Social Security payments. And so are you if you are over 65.

Second: Call your Social Security office and inquire about part-time help so you can get out of the house. (Sounds like you're going bananas.)

Third: Your mother may be eligible for food stamps. Check the phone book under Food Stamps.

Fourth: You need to know how to present your mother's needs to your brother. Even a small monthly amount would be a great help. (Ask your clergyman or a counselor for guidance in this area.)

Fifth: You need help for yourself in dealing with your feelings about your mother. Each of us wants to be a good child to an aging parent but we all have needs of our own. Get counseling from your local Mental Health Center, your clergyman, the Family Service Association or your city or county office of the aging. Try them all. Be persistent. You CAN put together a better system of care for your mother and a better life for yourself if you try. — Jane O., Washington, D.C.

Dear Jane: Thanks for a superb letter. You didn't ask me to plug your book, but I'm doing it anyway. Title: "When Your Parents Grow Old," by Jane Otten, publisher, Funk and Wagnalls, price $9.95.

Here's another good letter — same subject.

Dear Ann: Before I begin what may seem a hard-boiled letter, let me say my sympathies are with the people who are trying to care for elderly parents at home. Here are some suggestions:

1. Realize that your mother is probably suffering from some form of senility, manifested in unusual demands, infantile, egocentric behavior, etc.

2. Quit being a martyr! GO out when you feel like it and LEARN to turn a deaf ear when she yells at you. Start to make it up to yourself for all the time you've lost for your own life's fulfillment.

3. Get a lawyer. Consult the legal aid society (listed in the phone book) and see what arrangements can be made for you and your brother (the rat!) to share costs for your mother's care. See if he can be forced to reimburse you for past costs. Your mother is HIS problem, too.

4. Grow up! If, at your age, you still feel dominated by parents, then you need professional counseling. A clergyman (WITH counseling credentials) is a good choice, or your county mental health society (see your phone book) can refer you — probably for no fee.

5. When your mother starts her tirades, leave the room and close the door behind you. Turn up the radio or TV REALLY LOUD. Go for a walk. Getting out of the house can do wonders. I am — Praying For You In Buffalo

Prostitute sues over K.C. drive

KANSAS CITY (AP) — A prostitute has filed a $2.2 million suit against the city and several top officials in response to the city's "war on prositution."

Theresa Anne Rowell, who has adopted the name Ocelot in her role as a spokesman for the Kansas City chapter of a national prostitutes organization, COYOTE, sued for damages in two alleged cases of false arrest and said the city conspired to violate the civil rights of women suspected of being prostitutes.

Among those sued was Mayor Charles Wheeler.

Moluccan terrorists free man needing medical help

ASSEN, The Netherlands (AP) — South Moluccan terrorists holding 53 hostages on a train in northern Holland released a 46-year-old man Wednesday and said he needed immediate hospitalization.

The man, Theo van Hattem, was the third hostage freed by the extremists on the train.

Dutch officials said they did not know yet what was wrong with him.

The terrorists telephoned the government's crisis center and asked for an ambulance.

"They told our listening post that in their opinion the man needed immediate hospitalization," Justice Ministry spokeswoman Toos Faber said.

The ambulance drew up about 500 yards from the train. Van Hattem stepped off the train alone and walked down the embankment but "couldn't go any further," an official said. A stretcher was brought, and he was taken to a hospital in Groningen.

The terrorists on the train released two pregnant women on Sunday.

Premier Joop den Uyl and his cabinet met until late Tuesday debating whether mediators should make another attempt as public pressure mounted for a quick end to the 16-day-old sieges of the train and a school in which four hostages are held.

The cabinet met in The Hague after Justice Minister Andries van Agt conferred with Josina Soumokil and Dr. Hassan Tan, the two leaders of the South Moluccan community who met last Saturday with the gunmen on the train. The meeting produced no progress toward a settlement, officials said.

Authorities said an increasing number of citizens are demanding decisive action to end the twin sieges, which began May 23. Van Agt said Sunday if the terrorists held out much longer, the government would consider "hard action."

Letters, telegrams and telephone calls were pouring in demanding that the government get tough. Police Capt. Ap Folgerts said suggestions ranged from dynamiting the train to snaring the terrorists in mansize mousetraps.

A Justice Ministry spokesman said the gunmen appeared to be "much tougher" than previous Moluccan terrorists and apparently are capable of withstanding a strategy of waiting them out.

Seven to 10 terrorists are holed up on the commuter train, which is surrounded by troops and police in the countryside about eight miles north of Assen. Four more South Moluccans are holding four teachers in the Bovensmilde elementary school on the outskirts of Assen. The gunmen freed 105 children and one teacher after four days when half the youngsters became ill.

The gunmen have demanded the release of 21 other South Moluccans held in Dutch jails for terrorist activities and a plane to fly them out of the country.

The South Moluccans' terror campaign is aimed at getting Dutch support for the independence from Indonesia of their native islands in the former Dutch East Indies.

Youth alive; under water 20 minutes

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) — An 8-year-old Springfield youth remained in critical condition in intensive care early Wednesday after he spent more than 20 minutes under water Tuesday in a near drowning, authorities say.

Lt. Ray Sias of the Greene County Sheriff's office said a call was placed to authorities at 11:15 a.m. when Mark Staudt was swimming under water in the James River and failed to come up.

He said the youth was pulled from the water at 11:40 a.m.

"Obviously it's possible because it apparently happened in this case," said Greene County Medical Examiner Erwin Busiek. "A person could survive but it would be rare to the point of being freakish."

Authorities speculated a spasm of the larynx may have trapped air in his lungs and prolonged life.

Plains pastor takes new job

PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — The Rev. Bruce Edwards, who stirred up his Baptist congregation in President Carter's home town last year when he tried to get it to allow blacks to become members, will minister to a Hawaii congregation.

The Rev. Mr. Edwards, who resigned his post here in February, said he will take a post with the Makakilo Baptist Church sometime in July.

The 30-year-old minister said he holds no grudges about his congregation's resistance to integration.

"That was something that happened, and we just try to make the best of it and go on," he said.

Government awards contract to design gasification plant

CENTRALIA, Ill. (AP) — A Chicago-based consortium of power companies has received a $24 million federal contract to design a coal gasification plant that could be built in Southern Illinois.

The Energy Research and Development Administration awarded the contract to design the plant and will provide $23 million for the design. If the Illinois site were chosen as a site for the proposed plant, ERDA and the consortium would share the remaining $310 million needed to build the plant. When completed, it would produce 18 million cubic feet of gas and 2,400 barrels of crude oil a day.

Willis Holder, representative of the Illinois Coal Gasification Group (ICGG) was in Washington Tuesday to sign an agreement for the development plan.

The ICGG is composed of Northern Illinois Gas, Aurora; the Peoples Gas, Light & Coke Co. of Chicago; the Central Illinois Public Service Co. of Springfield; the Central Illinois Light Co. of Peoria and North Shore Gas of Waukegan.

"Success of this project will mean more available gas to warm our homes and can provide another valuable use for Illinois-mined coal," said Gov. James R. Thompson. "It is clearly a plus for all Illinois citizens."

Plans call for development of the project at the Captain Mine of Southwestern Illinois Coal Co. and its parent organization, Arch Minerals of St. Louis. The plant would be located between Cutler and Willisville in coal-rich Perry County.

Illinois Department of Mines and Minerals statistics for April show the five mines reporting from Perry County as accounting for just over one million tons of coal.

There is no assurance, however, that Illinois will even get the project.

Rep. Paul Simon, D-Ill., said ERDA also has arranged with CONOCO Coal Development Corp. of Stamford, Conn., to draft plans for a gasifiction plant in Noble County, Ohio.

In 21 months, ERDA will choose to fund either the Ohio project or the Southern Illinois plan. But Simon said both may be approved if there is money enough.

He said the Illinois consortium would pay half the construction costs and ERDA would pay the other half. He said Illinois officials told him they were willing to use available coal development bond money to assist ICGG in paying its share.

Simon said the plant could provide gas for three communities the size of Carbondale, Mount Vernon and Centralia.

"Obviously, that could mean hundreds and perhaps thousands of new jobs in construction and operation of the proposed plant and in mining coal," said Simon.

Senate opens debate on clean air changes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate is opening debate on legislation that would revise clean air regulations, following a high-gear automobile industry lobbying campaign aimed at weakening auto exhaust standards.

Backers of the bill are fighting efforts to tack the weaker requirements onto the measure.

The bill is a major overhaul of the 1970 Clean Air Act and calls for a one-year delay in a scheduled tightening of emission standards. Senate debate began Wednesday. Senators on both sides predicted a major floor battle with the outcome too close to call.

At issue are tough new tailpipe standards scheduled to take effect with 1978 model cars, to be produced beginning later this year.

The industry claims it cannot meet the standards.

Calling for 90 per cent reduction in hydrocarbon, carbon monoxide and nitrogen oxide emissions, the requirements were to have taken effect in 1975, but three one-year delays have been granted.

The industry says it already has reduced emissions by about 80 per cent, but achieving an additional few percentage points will be difficult and costly and will impair fuel efficiency.

It launched what many veteran members of Congress have called one of the heaviest lobbying campaigns ever, enlisting auto dealers in nearly every state and congressional district to help press for weaker standards. The AFL-CIO and United Auto Workers joined in the effort, with union officials claiming stiff tailpipe standards could hurt car sales and cause unemployment.

The House agreed to the industry-backed amendment, voting 255-139 last month to keep the existing auto emission standards for two more years. They would be followed by laxer standards for carbon monoxide and nitrogen oxides than those now scheduled to take effect.

The vote was a rejection of a Carter administration-backed proposal for a one-year extension to be followed by tighter controls phased in over five years.

The Senate bill, similar to the administration proposal, calls for the same basic one-year delay in the 1978 standards but would impose the tougher standards more quickly, by 1980.

Sens. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, and Robert Stafford, R-Vt., the chairman and ranking GOP member of the subcommittee that wrote the bill, urged the Senate to resist the industry lobbying campaign and "require the unequivocal cleanup of the automobile by 1980.

Sens. Robert Griffin, R-Mich., and Donald Riegle, D-Mich. are sponsoring the industry amendment. Riegle said the amendment would protect public health while giving consumers "the least cost and greatest energy savings."

The Senate bill could add about $330 to the average price of new cars, compared with about $170 for the industry-backed measure, according to congressional testimony.

Special film program is offered here

Boonslick Regional Library's bookmobile will offer a summer program of films for school-age children at five selected stops on its route.

Regular bookmobile patrons are asked not to come to the bookmobile during the special hour-long film showings.

The stops included on the schedule are Lincoln, LaMonte, Prairie Home, Otterville and Houstonia, it was reported.

Maddox act to be on TV

NEW YORK (AP) — Lester Maddox is joining the ranks of politicians turned television personalities.

The former Georgia governor and segregationist, who recently launched a nightclub routine with a black man, has been signed by NBC for a guest performance in a comedy special to be aired in September. NBC's announcement Tuesday did not disclose how much Maddox or his partner will receive.

Maddox and Bobby Lee Fears, whom Maddox pardoned while he was governor, bill their act "The Governor and the Dishwasher."

Maddox plays the harmonica, Fears strums a guitar, and they received mixed reviews when they opened on stage last month in Orlando, Fla.

Billy to judge diving contest

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — Billy Carter will judge a belly flop and cannonball diving contest here next month in the latest of his public appearances.

The President's brother will appear at the World Belly Flop and Cannonball Diving Championships, as promoter Tom Butler calls the event, on July 23.
